Doors to The Constitution's fall garden school will swing open at 9 o'clock this morning at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium, 1150 Peachtree street, and the bell for classes will toll at 10 o'clock. Throngs of eager garden lovers, anxious to obtain the latest tips on the planting and growing of flowers and shrubs, are expected to crowd the auditorium. Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown, of Decatur, nationally known garden expert, will direct the school, which will continue tomorrow and Thursday.

A fashion review, sponsored by Sears Department Store, will begin at 9:30 o'clock. It will precede regular classes each day of the school. Six adult models and four child models will exhibit the latest styles in wearing apparel. Mary Barnett, Sears stylist, will conduct the review.

Models will show styles for the mother, small children, college girl and business girl. Tomorrow's program will feature two sessions. There will be the regular classes at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night will be a special session for men and professional women. Doors will open at 7 o'clock tomorrow night.

Mrs. Crown will be introduced tomorrow morning by Mrs. Oscar Palmour, prominent figure in garden circles. The director will then discuss "New Ideas for Greater Utilization of the Backyard." Government Flees Doomed Hankow

Generalissimo Chiang and Wife Are First To Leave as Japanese Blast Way Into Outskirts of Capital; End of War Is Believed Near.

HANKOW, Tuesday, Oct. 25.—(UP)—The last members of the Chinese Nationalist government fled this doomed capital today as Japanese armies battered into the outskirts of the city, which is expected to fall by night.

China's wartime dictator, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his beautiful American-educated wife, the former Meiling Soong, were the first to leave.

They took off from the military airdrome in Wuchang shortly after midnight and were believed flying to Chungking, second of China's provisional capitals, in the western province of Szechuan.

Five other planes followed the Generalissimo's big silver Douglas monoplane at half-hour intervals. It was understood they contained his principal assistants and records of the "headquarters of the generalissimo," which has been China's counterpart of Japan's wartime "imperial headquarters."

A new headquarters was prepared for the generalissimo months ago in Chungking and some of his best personal, German-trained army divisions were sent there.

The Japanese were confident that major Chinese organized resistance has broken and that they need only to deliver final knock-out blows to win a clear-cut victory in their 15-month-old war with nationalist China.

All of Allies Could Not Have Halted Nazi Destruction, He Declares.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Oct. 24. (AP)—Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, declared today that Britain, France, Soviet Russia and their allies could not have saved Czechoslovakia from destruction by the German army if war had started in central Europe.

It was the foreign secretary's first speech since the international crisis.

Lord Halifax also said an Anglo-German "understanding" would be the "strongest guarantee that could be devised against repetition of European war dangers and called upon the people to aid in Britain's rearmament.

"It was the plain fact which no one has ever denied, that no war, no combination of effort by France, Russia and ourselves, no rallying to our cause of any others who would have joined, would have protected Czechoslovakia herself from destruction far more sweeping and complete than those sacrifices, great as they are, that have

Man and Wife Slay Blonde To Kill Devil

Self-Styled 'Messiah' Hammers Pretty Girl to Death With Irons.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Oct. 24.—(UP)—A sullen, poker-faced WPA worker, Wilfred Pichette, 38, who insists he is the "living Messiah," tonight admitted that he had beaten to death his blond servant girl with "the power of Christ" which he said he bought from a gypsy fortune teller for $2,000.

Pichette was held for arraignment on murder charges, together with his husky 173-pound wife, after he confessed to a Catholic priest that they had "killed the devil" with a flatiron and an iron poker, in which they said the "power" resided.

The slain girl, pretty 19-year-old Marian Doyle, a high school graduate, was found on a bed at the Pichette home, her face and body smashed by the blows of the flatiron and poker.

Mrs. Pichette admitted she had hit the girl "10 or 12 times with the power" while her husband pinned Miss Doyle to the floor, but she later told Prosecutor

HUNGARY TEMPERS DEMANDS, ISSUES NEW ULTIMATUM

Retreats From Stand Unacceptable to Czech Government, But Insists on Answer in 48 Hours.

ARBITRATION PART OF REVISED CLAIMS

Mighty Fortifications, Vast Resources Would Have To Be Yielded.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Hungary dropped about 30 per cent of her previous demands for territory in Czechoslovakia today in a compromise proposal submitted to the Prague government.

The compromise was offered after Hungary for weeks apparently had stood fast in territorial negotiations with Czechoslovakia. In a communique tonight the Hungarian government made it clear it was determined to settle the dispute with Czechoslovakia by peaceful means and not to resort to arms.

Army of 500,000.

This followed preparation of an army of almost 500,000 men along the Czechoslovak frontier for any emergency.

Hungary's new stand was understood in diplomatic circles to have been taken only after Germany, Italy and Poland strongly advised her not to continue pushing demands which would be unacceptable to any Czechoslovak government and which would endanger peace.

Hungary's Offer.

Hungary's later offer, described as "final," and with an answer demanded within 48 hours, contains the following four proposals:

1. That undisputed areas of Czechoslovakia claimed by Hungary be occupied by Hungarian troops without further delay.
2. That plebiscites be held in disputed districts not later than November 30.
3. That in the event Czechoslovakia should reject these demands, a German, Polish and Italian joint jury should arbitrate the dispute.
4. That the right of "self-determination" be given to Ruthenians, Slovaks, and other nationalities.

Drastic Measures.

Only if Czechoslovakia should not acknowledge Hungary's "final" proposal and the provision for arbitration by three powers would Hungary feel free to adopt drastic measures.

Should the Czechoslovak government accept the proposals, its troops would have to evacuate some 10,000 square kilometers (3,861 square miles) of "undisputed area" on November 1. The Czechoslovak army would have to turn over to Hungary fortifications which were built at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars.

Rich timber sections, ore mines and an extensive railroad system also would be returned to Hungary.

Fog Ties Up Traffic, Five Killed in London

LONDON, Oct. 24.—(UP)—Dense fog blanketed London and south England today, resulting in at least five deaths in traffic accidents and paralyzing shipping in the Thames.

Hundreds of vessels were forced to anchor, and thousands of workers were late because of delayed trains.

Later in the day the fog lifted partially, but weather forecasters said it would return tonight.

School 'Flying Squadrons' Prepare for Bond Pleas

Crack members of Murphy Junior High school's speaking team prepare to carry the "message for a new $445,000 school" to feeder schools in a concerted drive for approval of the $6,550,000 city-county bond issue Nov. 2. Shown, left to right, are Dorothy Rife, Doris Street, Lillian Field and Martha King.

The Maddox Junior High school mixed flying squadron yesterday rehearsed its lines preparatory to the drive for approval of bond funds, which will bring more than $15,000,000 in improvements to Atlanta and Fulton county. An allocation of $195,000 is provided for a new Maddox school. Left to right are Helen Slay, Robert Harris, Louise Fuller and Watson McCollum.

LAGRANGE YOUTH KILLED IN CRASH

Atlanta Woman, Passing on Hill, Swerves Car Into Wagon When Blocked

A 13-year-old boy was killed and another's legs were broken yesterday afternoon near LaGrange when a car driven by Mrs. Gladys Jennings, of 1084 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, crashed into a small wagon on which the youngsters were riding.

Needham Avery, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Avery, of LaGrange, was killed almost instantly. Lewis W. Handley Jr., 13, had both legs broken. The wagon was hooked behind a mule and wagon.

Sheriff E. V. Hilyer said "they were on their way home just outside LaGrange when Mrs. Jennings topped a hill behind them. She started to pass them and discovered another car was coming over the hill. She swerved back into the small wagon."

Witnesses said as the car started to pass the wagon the boys threw up their hands in a futile attempt to keep Mrs. Jennings from going by.

Sheriff Hilyer said no charges had been made against Mrs. Jennings.

You're Right, Winter Raps At the Door

Frost Forecast With Temperature Dropping to Bottom of 42 Degrees.

Yep, that's right—it really is a bit on the chilly side this morning. In fact, the coldest weather of the season, thus far, is upon Atlanta, plus frost. Thermometers are expected to reach a bottom of 42 degrees, with a ceiling of 56 degrees.

The whole southeast is experiencing light to heavy frosts borne eastward by a high pressure area extending from Texas to Illinois. Hereabouts, however, neither plants nor late crops are in danger, Weather Bureau officials believe.

Tennessee, Kentucky, the Carolinas and northern Georgia felt falling temperatures last night while frost also was predicted in portions of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

No frost was predicted south of Macon, however.

In Alabama a light frost was expected in the interior, while in Mississippi similar conditions were predicted in the south portion.

Light frost was listed for the area of Lake Pontchartrain in Louisiana.

Generally fair and warmer weather was forecast in the northern states after a week-end marked by freezing conditions in many sections and snow in Wisconsin, upper Michigan and Minnesota.

TEACHERS OF CITY TO AID BOND DRIVE

1,600 Hear Plans for Their Activities in Support of Improvements.

More than 1,600 Atlanta school teachers and principals yesterday applauded in approval of requests they direct the enthusiasm of their 60,000 school children charges into an intensive campaign for approval of the $6,550,000 city-county bond issue next Tuesday.

The meeting was held at the municipal auditorium and the entire teaching staff was present to hear Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, vice president of the Atlanta Board of Education; Mayor Hartsfield; Willis A. Sutton, school superintendent; Mrs. Percy A. Rich, president of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher Council; Miss Ira Jarrell, president of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' Association; Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor of the First Christian church and representative of the bond campaign headquarters, and D. F. McClatchey, member of the board of education, speak on the bond issue and explain its benefits.

Among the activities planned for the school students and teachers were:

1. Issuance of special bond editions of school newspapers to be taken into every home where there is a child in school.
2. Community parades of students in at least 10 sections of Atlanta where about 10,000 students

PLANTS IN STATE FORCED TO CLOSE, OPERATORS CLAIM

30 Sawmills Shut Down, Pecan Shelling, Tobacco Industries Dealt Blow From New Act.

HECTIC CONFUSION RECALLS NRA DAYS

Only Smaller Hosiery Mills Are in Low Wage Group, Executive Says.

More than 1,000 workers in Georgia and a number estimated in excess of 80,000 throughout the country were thrown out of work yesterday by shutdowns of plants as the federal wage-hour law became effective.

At least 30 saw mills in Georgia were closed, while the number of pecan-shelling plants—the other industry chiefly affected—could not be determined. However, in Washington, J. Sellman, president of the National Pecan Shellers of America, said all the plants in his industry were shut down, taking jobs from 50,000 workers.

Tobacco workers were thrown out of jobs throughout North Carolina's flue-cured tobacco belt when stemming and redwing plants closed because of the minimum wage provisions. Some estimates placed the total at 30,000.

Administrator Elmer F. Andrews expressed the hope in the capital that the closings were temporary, and asserted that most interstate industries were complying "wholeheartedly" with the 25-cents per hour and 44 hours per week minimums invoked by the law.

Hectic Scenes.

Meantime hectic scenes and general confusion, reminiscent of the early NRA days, were evident throughout the national labor department's wage-hour division, charged with administering the act.

"Representatives of the pecan-shelling industry, seeking its exemption from the statute, declared the law forced their closing as it was impossible to pay the minimum. The average wage in the industry was given as from 10 to 15 cents per hour.

An additional development was an explanatory reply from Taylor Durham, executive director of the Southern Hosiery Manufacturers' Association, to a declaration of the women's bureau of the labor department that 32 per cent of workers in Georgia's seamless hosiery industry earned less than the law's minimum.

Smaller Mills Hit.

"The larger mills are not affected by the law and the wage

BURGLARS GET $700 IN WEEK-END RAIDS

Seven Different Theft Cases Registered With City Police.

Burglars conducted a "cash campaign" during the week end, obtaining approximately $700 in various parts of Atlanta, police reported.

Approximately $400 was stolen from the New Yorker Ginger Ale Company offices, 269 Luckie street, N. W., Sunday night when intruders knocked the combination off a safe.

Thieves who pried open a desk in the offices of the Cumberland Battery Manufacturing Company, 303 Marietta street, obtained $95 in cash and more than $200 worth of checks, police said.

Instead of telling police, F. H. McDonald, of 305 McKenzie drive, N. E., was told by police early Monday morning that his house had been burglarized. Radio Patrolmen H. R. McCurley and R. E. Mann saw a screen had been removed and became suspicious. McDonald discovered $15 had been taken from his trousers.

B. L. Campbell, of 25 Ormond street, told police an armed negro robbed him of $13 in the lobby of the Peachtree arcade Sunday night.

Low Ling, owner of a laundry at 42 Georgia avenue, S. W., reported theft of $5 and a watch.

Two tires and wheels were removed from the automobile of E. P. Lindsey, of 856 Ponce de Leon avenue, Sunday night, he told police. Another tire and wheel was taken from a car belonging to W. H. Ward, of 817 Ponce de Leon avenue.

been demanded of her," the foreign secretary said.

"We could have embarked," he continued at a Conservative party political meeting, "upon a general war in which Czechoslovakia would have endured—as would all taking part in what would have become a general holocaust of human life—cruel losses of her manhood and of her resources and, at the end, no one would have redrawn her frontiers in the form in which they had ostensibly gone to war to protect."

"There was, indeed, no perfect course—but only and always a hard choice between alternatives one of which meant war and for Czechoslovakia, destruction, and the other of which means the terms for Czechoslovakia that we know."

"The decision to secure a settlement by which war might be averted from half the world was right."

The foreign secretary said "We talk much today of guarantees" and continued:

"What we are now witnessing is a revision of the treaty of Versailles for which provision was made in the covenant of the League (of Nations) but which never until now had been made effective."

"Hungary Given Boost."

"The Hungarian government now is in negotiation with the Czechoslovak government and we hope they may reach an equitable solution which will remove or lessen racial grievances."

"We recognize that Hungary has had legitimate claims and we trust that means may be found to meet them."

Turning to Britain's rearmament, which has been characterized publicly as inadequate, the foreign secretary declared:

"If this country is to play its full part with others in securing peace, it must be able to speak with equal weight."

"One-sided armament and one-sided disarmament are both impossible and give no help to peace."

"Therefore, we must take all measures—already taken months ago by continental countries—that are essential to our strength and safety."

"Our own course is clear. We must lose no opportunity of helping forward, so that they may take substantial shape, the results of personal contacts established between Germany, Italy, France and ourselves at Munich."

To Keep Old Friends.

"In doing so we shall not abandon old friends in the search for new."

"But we do intend if we can to improve our own relations with all who are willing to improve their own relations with us and, if we can, to work for a general understanding in which all can meet on common ground of mutual tolerance and respect."

Before "bringing the world into smoother waters," he said, Britain might go through a period of "armed peace" which would necessitate "great sacrifices" from all classes of persons—a reference which was interpreted to mean that the government was seriously contemplating some form of compulsory national service to speed its rearmament drive.

'MAIL ORDER' SPY SAYS RELIEF FUNDS USED FOR PAY-OFF

Rumrich Describes 20-Years-After Plot To Avenge Germany.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(P)—Testimony that Nazi Germany allegedly financed spy plots in the United States with money from German winter relief funds created a stir late today in the federal court trial of pretty, red-haired Johanna (Jenni) Hoffmann, 26, and two men codefendants on espionage charges.

The witness, Gunther Gustav Rumrich, 32, United States army deserter and confessed spy, said the information came to him from Karl Schluter, the spy ring's alleged "contact man."

Rumrich said he never doubted he was in touch with authorized German agents during his shipboard career as a "mail order" spy for the Third Reich, but that he sometimes doubted Schluter "because he told me things which were rather unusual for a German to mention."

He cited the alleged "borrowing" of winter relief funds as one of the things a German would not mention.

Dipping ever deeper into his apparently inexhaustible supply of spy-plot tales, Rumrich described a fantastic "20-year-after" scheme to avenge Germany against the United States for allied bombings during the World War.

In his sixth day as a key witness for the government, Rumrich testified Erich Glaser, 28, former United States army private, one of the three defendants on trial, was motivated by boyhood terror in joining the conspiracy.

"He told me he had lived at Baden, near the French border, during the World War and had experienced severe bombings. He said this would be a fine chance to get even with America for those bombings and because America ran the death knell for us (in Germany) after years of fighting," the witness said.

Glaser, a dark-eyed, stoic-faced youth born in Germany, is a naturalized American. He was attached to the air force at Mitchell field, Long Island, until arrested by federal agents last February.

The New York Post said United States Attorney Lamar Hardy has evidence that the espionage ring was directed in Berlin in co-operation with the Japanese government.

The newspaper said Hardy planned to expose the alleged ring of Japan in the spy plot but was "hushed" up on orders by the State Department.

Admiral Woodward Urges Bigger Navy for Protection

Atlanta-Born Officer Says World Is 'Like a Mad Dog.'

By LAESTON D. FARRAR. "A bigger navy—for protection against a world gone mad."

In this one sentence, Rear Admiral Clark Howell Woodward, Atlanta's highest ranking contribution to the navy, summed up his preparedness philosophy last night, as he chatted with friends at the Piedmont Driving Club.

The admiral arrived in Atlanta yesterday afternoon, accompanied by his wife, and will appear on programs in celebration of Navy Day. He is emphatic in his preparedness views. He said anyone familiar with the world situation knows it is "like a mad dog today, and we must protect ourselves from it."

6 Years Behind. "Although, numerically speaking, the United States is No. 2 in navy power among the powerful nations of the world, actually we are six years behind time in our shipbuilding, or we were in 1936 when our treaty with Japan and England and other powers was abrogated.

"Since that time, Japan's building has been unknown to us and we do not know really how we stand. In the United States, anyone can keep up with the number of ships being built simply by reading the papers, since congressional appropriations are made in the daylight, but in Japan they carry out their planning and building in secrecy."

However, the admiral did not spend much time worrying about America's navy, for, as he expressed it, he was "back at home and glad to be here." A host of friends welcomed him and Mrs. Woodward when they arrived in Atlanta and he does not anticipate an idle moment while here.

Born Near Atlanta. Recalling that he was born in "the country near Atlanta," he pointed out that this is the land where Howell Mill road now runs, with a group of beautiful homes and thriving business houses near by. Yet, it was "the country" when he was a boy.

He will be 62 years old on next March 4, yet he still boasts that he can place his feet on one straight chair, his head on the other and hold the weight of a man on his stomach.

"I could do that when I was a boy here in Atlanta, although I could hold three persons, or a 350-pound weight, then—and I may not be able to do it now," he smiled.

The memory of Atlanta strongest in his mind, was the time he was an editor. He was a first cousin of the late Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, but the admiral did not stick to his newspaper work.

Annapolis Graduate. He left to "join the navy" with his parents' consent, or with their prompting, and enrolled at Annapolis on September 6, 1895. He has been in the navy ever since.

Powerful in his bearing, Admiral Woodward left no intimation that he would have his life otherwise, if he had the choice to make again. But the "Howell" of Atlanta of 40 years ago still loves Atlanta.

"There's no city like it in the world," he said—and he meant it, after having seen the world, even if that's not the reason he joined the navy.

Admiral Woodward will speak at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon before members of the Atlanta Kiwanis Club in the civic room of the Ansley hotel. His speech will be broadcast at 1:15 over Station WGST. Tonight he will inspect the naval reserve battalion at Georgia Tech.

Call on Hartsfield. This afternoon he will call on Mayor William B. Hartsfield. His program tomorrow calls for a visit to Berry school, Most of Berry, Ga., where he is scheduled to make a speech at 11:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. He will come

The army and the navy both gave Rear Admiral Clark Howell Woodward (center) a warm welcome when he arrived yesterday for Navy Day activities. Captain Reed M. Fawell (left), commander of the naval R. O. T. C. unit at Georgia Tech, and Captain Joe D. Moss (right), aide-de-camp to Major General S. D. Embick, were among those greeting him.

Comforts of Hotel Life Claimed In Description of Defense Line

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—(P)—The newspaper Der Angriff and Berliner Nachtausgabe today published the first pictures of Germany's new fortifications opposite the French frontier.

The views showed, principally, tank barricades consisting of countless cement pillars built closely together and extending in an endless band across the countryside.

Other pictures included shots of machine gun pillboxes, both from within and without, and of laborers camouflaging emplacements, constructing barricade ditches and a system of dams for flooding defense territory.

Der Angriff, in an accompanying article, explained that one of the principal features of the western fortifications line was its defense against tanks and other motorized fighting equipment. It called the anti-tank defense "hump-back barricades."

"Bastions shoot out of the earth like mushrooms," the newspaper said, on places which have not been camouflaged with earth and bushes.

Elsewhere, however, it said the pillboxes and other defenses were back to Atlanta and be entertained by friends tomorrow night.

Thursday morning, official Navy Day, he will call on Governor Rivers. In the afternoon he will inspect the Naval R. O. T. C., at Georgia Tech.

High point of the Navy Day program will come at 7 o'clock Thursday night when Atlanta notables gather for the Navy Day banquet in the Baltimore hotel. The admiral's speech will be broadcast at 10:30 o'clock.

Admiral Woodward has two sisters and a brother in Atlanta. They are Mrs. T. T. Flagler and Mrs. Roscoe H. Hearn and Harry P. Woodward, Daniel H. Woodward, of New York, city, and Mrs. Julian Chamber, of Knoxville, Tenn., are his brother and sister.

F.D.R. AT DESK AGAIN FOR DEFENSE STUDY

He Will Make Radio Address November 4 in Behalf of Lehman.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(P)—President Roosevelt returned to the capital tonight from a week's stay at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

The chief executive will speak by radio for the New York Democratic ticket from Hyde Park November 4. He has canvassed campaign strategy and party chances during a week of conferences with state leaders and principal party nominees here.

They reported him as feeling confident Governor Herbert H. Lehman, seeking a fourth term, and the rest of the Democratic ticket would be victorious again.

Although most Democrats were forecasting victory by smaller margins, Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator who spent the week with the President, predicted a Democratic majority of 500,000.

Hopkins predicted a drop in the "relief curve" in the immediate future due to "improved business and employment conditions." He said he also believed relief appropriations could be cut for the next fiscal year.

The President has been holding preliminary budget conferences for weeks. He will start actual estimating tomorrow with Danie W. Bell, acting budget director.

Apparently determined to hold non-military department appropriations to a minimum to allow larger expenditures for defense, he requested Bell to bring along a supply of blue pencils.

Estimates for relief next year and for the last four months of the current fiscal year—March 1 to July 1, 1939—will be undertaken after December 15.

Bell was reported ready with preliminary figures for several departments.

WOMAN IS ACCUSED OF KIDNAPING GIRLS

Rochester, N. Y., Woman Held in Disappearance of Her Own Daughter.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 24.—(P)—Charged with kidnaping her own daughter and another girl, both 15 years old, a Rochester woman and her second husband were under arrest here tonight. The daughter had been legally adopted by her granduncle when a baby.

The couple, Grace Curtis, 42, and her husband, Claude, 36, were said by Detective Captain Anthony Andrews to have driven Mrs. Curtis' daughter, Pauline Bachelior, and Eileen Lampman to Virginia after the girls had said they wished to "run away."

At Millersburg, Va., the girls left the luggage compartment of a light coupe in which they had ridden, lying down for some 300 miles and started alone for Washington, they related. They were picked here for questioning after which the charges were preferred against the couple.

Assistant United States District Attorney Goodman A. Sarachian said that as the girls had left the car and walked across state lines the couple would not be prosecuted under the Lindbergh law.

JAPAN OUTLINES POLICY FOR CHINA

Statement Indicates Fall of Hankow Will Bring End of Conflict.

TOKYO, Oct. 24.—(P)—Japan will compel China to "co-operate" in a broad program embracing political, economic and cultural pursuits when the Japanese-China War is over, government sources disclosed in a statement published tonight.

The statement, distributed by Domei, Japan's only major news agency, also set forth Japan's determination to hold China under military occupation indefinitely after fighting ceases.

The pronouncement was taken, as an indication of Japan's belief that the capture of Hankow would bring to a close the purely military phase of the conflict.

Japan's program for control of China was embodied in three main pillars listed in the statement as follows:

1. Industrial and economic "reciprocity."

2. China must join the anti-Communist accord of Japan, Germany and Italy, and prohibit all anti-Japanese movements.

3. China must abandon "all policies and forms of education likely to destroy amity" with Japan.

The statement reiterated that negotiations with the present Chinese government headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Japan will assist the rise of a new regime, the declaration said, with which all post-war dealings would be conducted.

MISSING BOY AGAIN IN PARENTS' ARMS

Son of Wealthy N. Y. Accountant Returned After Shopping Visit.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y., Oct. 24. (UP)—Three-year-old Dean Tripp, son of a wealthy accountant, was returned home today after being missing since Saturday morning.

The child disappeared with George O'Connell, 36-year-old handyman in the home of Wilbour D. Tripp, after a shopping trip to New York. O'Connell and the child arrived at the Long Island home this morning from New York city.

O'Connell appeared surprised when police surrounded him at the Tripp home. The child ran into his mother's arms.

Mrs. Tripp, who was near collapse, told O'Connell: "I never want to see you again."

Questioned by a federal agent, and Long Island police, O'Connell, employed in the Tripp home for 13 months, said he took the child to spend the week-end with friends. He said he couldn't understand why an alarm had been sent out.

Prosecution. Police Chief James Humphrey said it was unlikely O'Connell would be held because the child's parents had announced they would not prosecute.

Tripp said he had taken O'Connell and the boy into New York city Saturday morning. He said it had been understood O'Connell would go shopping and then return home that night.

O'Connell told police he went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Ogden, in Queens, where he remained until this morning.

He said the Tripp family knew the Ogden. O'Connell said he had telephoned the Tripp home Sunday, but nobody answered. He said he decided to call later but forgot to do so.

Tripp became alarmed last night and notified Nassau county authorities. He discounted kidnapping because, he said, O'Connell and his son, Dean, were boon companions.

WPA OFFICIAL HITS CHARGES BY DAVIS

Declares No Employee Involved in Political Coercion.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(P) Acting WPA Administrator Aubrey Williams told the senate campaign expenditures committee today there was "not a scintilla of truth" in charges of political intimidation made by Senator Davis, Republican, Pennsylvania, candidate for re-election.

Williams sent to the committee the results of an investigation which he said he ordered after reading press accounts of the Pennsylvania Republican's statements.

"Sworn testimony and documented evidence establishes beyond question that no employee of the WPA referred to in these charges has been involved in any political coercion," said Williams.

Number of colds—with all their discomforts and dangers—cut 24.66 per cent. Length of colds—cut 28.78 per cent. Sickness from colds—reduced more than half (50.88%). School Absences due to colds—reduced even more (57.86%).

PERFECT RECORDS. The three Kernersville (N. C.) youngsters shown above were members of a large group that followed Vicks Plan for five winter months, and had no absences due to colds. (This perfect record is unusual, but just what the results given above for all those who followed Vicks Plan.)

Helps PREVENT COLDS VapoRub is a family standby for all over the country for relieving misery of colds. Massaged on throat, chest and back, VapoRub works two ways at once: (1) It acts directly through the skin like a poultice—(2) its medicated vapors are inhaled direct to irritated air-passages. This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—eases coughing—relieves local congestion—and you soon feel comfortable again.

1 Voter in 2 Thinks U. S. May Fight Germany Again

Public Opinion Survey Shows Apprehension Has Increased.

By American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—In spite of the overwhelming desire for peace that marks the American public, almost half the people of this country think the United States will have to fight Germany again in their lifetime.

That fact, revealed in a new nationwide survey of the American Institute of Public Opinion, indicates one of the most important by-products of Adolf Hitler's marches into Austria and Czechoslovakia this year. Whether the forebodings of a large section of the American public should prove correct or not, their feelings hold great significance for American national defense policy in the months to come and not a little significance for the governments of the rest of the world.

Institute surveys in the recent crisis showed that a "sympathy bloc" exists between America and her World War allies, and that while the country desires to remain neutral we would favor England and France over Germany and Italy, 20 to 1. Today's survey adds one more link to the evidence of American sympathies with the democracies.

The survey also casts a serious sidelight on the country's preparations to celebrate Armistice Day, November 11, anniversary of Germany's surrender to Marshal Foch and the Allied forces which took place in a French railway coach back of the western front just 20 years ago.

In the Institute survey a cross-section of the voters in all states were asked:

dents will march to impress voters with the importance of eliminating fire trap portables or buildings which have become obsolete and dangerous. They will champion all 15 of the items included in the bond issue list.

3. Teacher appeals directly to at least five registered voters to secure their votes for the issue.

4. Bands, drum corps and other facilities of schools will be lent to other schools when they march in order to arouse more enthusiasm.

5. Flying squadrons of students from practically every school in Atlanta will visit feeder schools to talk to students who will be graduated into the present fire traps if new and modern facilities are not provided.

6. Placing of signs on wooden portables reading "The Bond Issue Will Help To Remove This Portable."

More than 7,600 pupils and teachers may be given a holiday to work for passage of the bonds at the polls, Sutton indicated.

"We'll need the teachers to help get people to the polls anyway, and the children also might do a lot to help," he said. "I may be talking too fast or out of school since the Board of Education has not acted on it, but it seems to me it would be a good thing to do."

"There must be a spirit of loyalty

Will America have to fight Germany again? A survey shows that almost one American in every two thinks so at the present time following Chancellor Hitler's moves in Austria and Czechoslovakia.

"Do you think the United States will have to fight Germany again in your lifetime?" Throughout the country the answers are:

Yes 48%

No 52%

Fear Grows Since April.

This means that American apprehension has increased somewhat since last April. At that time, following Hitler's quick thrust into Austria and the subsequent annexation of Germany and Austria, an Institute survey showed that 46 per cent of the voters thought the United States might fight Germany again.

New measurements of the public's attitude will be made from time to time to find out whether this apprehension grows or diminishes. Since public opinion changes with events, much may depend on the policy and patriotic purpose to get a sufficient number of voters to the polls to pass these bond items.

Mrs. Peterson said "Bond issues are not lost because people do not favor bonds for a progressive and growing community, but because enough people do not go to the polls and vote."

"Atlanta schools already have received about $2,000,000 from the federal government and if these bonds are approved it will receive more than $1,000,000 additional."

Mayor Hartsfield asserted the bonds need not increase the taxes of either the county or municipal governments, and added:

"There is no reason for any city employee to be apprehensive that the success of the bond issue will adversely affect his salary."

"Atlanta's bonded indebtedness is now $14,000,000 as compared to $22,000,000 for Birmingham and $38,000,000 for Dallas. Our indebtedness, therefore, is reasonably low. We can afford these bonds and we can afford not to vote them because we are going to get so much more money than we are asked to give."

Old Incinerator.

"The old incinerator, hidden away where we never know where it is unless the wind wafts an unpleasant odor in our direction, must be replaced. It was built many years ago, and right now is operating at double the capacity it was supposed to have at the time it was built."

"Just think what it would mean if it broke down. We could not even possibly wait for a bond issue. Your garbage must be destroyed. We can not take a chance on anything happening to it."

"All of us remember the time when we came to this building (the city auditorium) to hear some world-famed artist sing. The 122nd infantry is located in this building. There are funds to do that and at the same time keep it in Atlanta where the $200,000 the federal government spends each year in salaries can be kept in Atlanta trade channels. If we fail to vote for the armory, other cities are waiting to provide homes for several of the companies and dismember the unit to our loss. It is bad economy to refuse to vote for that just as it is false economy to oppose the incinerator because we can make it pay for itself by selling the additional steam which we can generate."

Bad Economy.

"In fact it is bad economy to vote against any one of the items submitted in the bond issue. They are all needed, they are vital to the future progress of Atlanta and Fulton county, and most of them are emergent."

"They are now building 42 passenger planes and plan to put them in operation at Atlanta's airport. The east and west runway can not possibly afford landing facilities for such large planes. One of the items provides for lengthening that runway. Atlanta must keep in the forefront of transportation."

"Need I say anything about Grady hospital or Battle Hill sanitarium?" We all know what these two institutions are and what they stand for. They need this help now.

"Our highway arteries are the blood streams through which flow the stimulus to our trade channels. We can not afford to have them congested any longer if we are to continue to progress."

"We are not running against any concerted opposition in this bond campaign. But we are running against public indifference and the general apathy of voters. There is the only danger to the success of the drive. Every item on this list is needed and must be done and done soon. We are foolish if we fail to take advantage of the federal and state funds which we can get now but which will be barred to us in the future."

Mrs. Rich promised the support of the Parent-Teacher Council, asserting:

"We believe no child is safe until all children are safe."

"It will be a hard fight to arouse and stir up enough interest to get sufficient votes to pass the bonds," Dr. Stauffer said. "That is our job. It is for a good cause, and we should do our best."

McClatchey told those present "the bonds must pass if I am allowed to stay in Atlanta because the people are demanding improvements for Henry Grady Boys' and Tech High schools."

Registrations in South Are Up 15.47 Per Cent.

DETROIT, Oct. 24.—(UP)—New car registrations throughout the nation for October will exceed September registrations for the first time since 1928 and for the second time in the industry's history, the R. L. Polk Company estimated today.

These were: East central states (Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee) 38.67 per cent; South Atlantic states (Florida, Georgia, Delaware, Maryland, North and South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia) 15.47 per cent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—(AP) Barbara Stanwyck, film actress, lost her appeal today in the California supreme court to prevent her former husband, Frank Fay, from visiting their six-year-old child, Dion Anthony Fay.

Fay, a former movie actor, and Miss Stanwyck were divorced in 1935.

ATLANTA, GA., OCTOBER 25, 1938.

THE COMMUNITY CHEST

The annual campaign to fill the Atlanta Community Chest will begin in the next few days. Once more citizens of this community will be asked to invest all they can possibly spare in those agencies which uphold the quality of humanity and make the human surroundings of us all better and finer.

There are some 32 agencies which receive their financial support from the Chest. Their needs are studied from a 12-month vision by the budget committee, a group of Atlanta's most capable—and hard-headed—businessmen. If that committee sets forth the needs of a given agency as essential, it is an assured fact the needs are exactly that.

It is but repeating an old truth to point out that, by holding this annual Community Chest campaign, all Atlantans are spared the trouble involved in responding to 32 campaigns, one for each agency. It is likewise a familiar fact that, through the Community Chest, the overhead costs are pared to a minimum and the agencies are steered away from duplication of effort and other lost motion.

Atlanta has, in recent years, not given as generously as she should to the Community Chest. The annual quotas have not been filled and other southern cities, of comparable size, have given much more liberally. The result of that laxity in gifts may, perhaps, account for some of the human suffering and the human want that has constituted one of the primary problems of the city.

Every Atlantan should give to the Chest, not only according to the measure of his possessions, but also according to his capacity to earn. The man blessed with a permanent job has an asset which he can, in this manner, share with the less fortunate, just as the man with a larger bank account can share his wealth.

There could be volumes written on the human needs and the emotional grounds for filling the Chest to overflowing. There is, however, the simple business truth, that gifts to the Chest are among the finest of investments, in that every fellow Atlantan who is lifted toward better things through a Chest agency, directly or indirectly aids each one of us to better conditions of life.

Think what a city we should have, how prosperous we all could be, if there wasn't an unfortunate family or a distressed individual to be rescued from ill-fate!

DAUGHTER OF VIKINGS

The romantic adventure of Anne Foy Bjornnes proved again that the Viking spirit still lives. Miss Bjornnes, a sturdy daughter of Norway, conquered the broad Atlantic and landed in New York in a 45-foot lifeboat, with sail, and a small crew, a voyage of which her Norse ancestors of long ago could well be proud. Adding a touch of romance to the ocean trip in the little boat, the young Norsewoman landed in this country to greet her fiancé, Captain Charles A. Crownshield, an American seaman. The couple will marry and then take a two-year honeymoon cruise to the south seas.

For Miss Bjornnes to bring her ship into port safely, despite the size of the boat, in these days of Queen Marys and Normandies, was entirely in keeping with tradition. It was a case where blood told, for Norsemen centuries ago sailed and rowed tiny ships into virtually every port of the world of those times. The record of these Scandinavian seamen is impressive. They touched Russia, Normandy, Sicily, Turkey; sailed all around England and well-remembered Leif Ericsson, 500 years before Columbus, saw the shores of the western hemisphere from the prow of a ship about the size of a box car.

These feats have been the foundations for legends, operas, stories and poems, telling of the loves and hates, the battles and seamanship of the old Norsemen. Thus it is in keeping with tradition that a clear-eyed daughter of Norway writes a modern life chapter to match the tales of old. Certainly, it is a refreshing note in an almost 100 per cent mechanical age. The only word left seems to be—"Skool!"

As to anti-Semitism, a spokesman for Rome says, "we shall not be rabid." It is always a comfort to feel the bigotry will be unbiased.

"We want no more territory," says the Führer, in a final word on the subject. (To be continued.)

A dilemma faces the Halloween novelty trade. They must try to sell those masks to a public calloused to the countenances of the new Caesars.

Once upon a time a blonde applied to Ziegfeld for work, and didn't show up 20 years after in the triangle shooting report as a Polles beauty.

WILL FRANCE TURN TO A DICTATOR?

The internal position of democratic France, hemmed in on the north by Nazi Germany and on the south by Fascist Italy, not to mention revolutionary Spain, is a precarious one, so far as remaining among the free nations of the world is concerned. The constant unwholesome influence of the totalitarian states, the almost daily belittlement of the few remaining democracies, the steady flow of propaganda over her borders, are never-ending destructive elements to upset the equilibrium of the people.

The recent diplomatic maneuverings at Munich set many French people to thinking their loosely knit parliamentary form of government failed when pitted against the concentrated force of dictatorship.

Although there are many signs that business is returning to normal; that serious labor troubles are unlikely; that the outlook for foreign trade is better than it has been, it is admitted that stable government is a practical necessity to bring these encouraging signs into reality. Serious consideration, therefore, is being given to the formation of a government of "public safety" under Premier Daladier—a government capable of quick, decisive and concentrated action, without the usual democratic red tape, to cope with any exigency which may arise.

If such a government were set up, however, the French, it is feared, would go the whole way toward dictatorship, setting aside, for the time being at least, all parliamentary forms. Whether such a dictatorship would, or even could, relinquish its powers after the present exigency has passed, is questionable. That, of itself, makes for hesitancy in a democratic nation such as France.

But France, as well as the other democratic nations of the world, has been shocked at discovering its inadequacy when called upon to compete, on an organizational and military basis, with the totalitarian states. Nations such as Germany and Italy, thrown on their own without resources, far outstripped the democracies by regimenting every man and woman to the best possible service, more or less on a slavery basis, for the sole benefit of the country.

Unless the French people swing quickly to the proposed government of "public safety"—which is simply a modified form of dictatorship—the disturbing influences now on the loose within their borders, as well as without, will, in all probability, eventually result in a wholly unwanted complete reversal of parliamentary government.

The so-called popular front has been broken. The Communists are in active opposition. The Socialists merely tolerate the present coalition and no more. A modified form of dictatorship, then, seems to be the only form of government available which could unite the discordant factions on the idea that saving France is the paramount national issue. It's a bitter reality, to be sure, but reality none the less.

HE'LL TAKE THE TAXES!

The problem of present-day multiple taxation, and how to meet the instalments when they fall due, forms no small part of the duties of management. Many business houses pay larger amounts, in the aggregate, to tax collectors than they are able to pay to the people who work for them, or are able to earn in the operation of the business. In some instances, more than the capital investment.

Every now and again, despite the annoying aspects of the problem, some individual comes along with an amusing suggestion which, while contributing nothing tangible to its ultimate solution, momentarily takes some of the seriousness out of it, and at the same time, forcefully points out the danger.

One of the most inequitable of all taxes, as is well known, is the levy against motor fuel. From one end of the land to the other it is based primarily on what the traffic will bear. In many states it amounts to more than 50 per cent of the retail price of gasoline. Queerly enough, however, the tax is technically an assessment against the distributor—a beautiful scheme to prevent the consumer, who really pays it, from taking credit on his income tax blank.

It was this constant daily passing of the tax to the ultimate bearer of all tax burdens, the consumer, which thoroughly convinced a service station operator in Evansville, Ind., he was on the wrong end of the business. So he announced publicly he would swap his four stations—leases, equipment, stock and good will—for an amount equal to what he collected in taxes and passed on, during any five-year period.

The idea of thus disposing of his business popped into his head immediately after he and a public accountant had completed state income tax returns for the business. It was discovered that he will have passed along in taxes during 1938, if the ratio of take for the first nine months of the year is maintained, an amount equal to more than the capitalization of the business. He decided to let somebody else collect the profits, he'd take the taxes! Needless to say, there were no offers.

Editorial of the Day

AN IRISH PLEBISCITE.

(From the Boston Herald.)

Eamon De Valera proposes a plebiscite in the different counties of northern Ireland, to determine which of them shall be incorporated in the territory of Eire. He invokes the precedent set in the case of Czechoslovakia. It is contended that at least four of the six counties, if given the opportunity, would elect to go under the jurisdiction of Dublin.

It is a proposal worthy of a stern logician; but logic is the last thing that will guide a British statesman, or indeed any statesman of the usual type. The solution of the Czech problem which Mr. De Valera invokes was the alternative to a world war. Does Mr. De Valera threaten to throw millions into misery and imperil civilization if his demands are not granted? He is not that kind of man.

The analogy between the Sudeten folk and the nationalist minority in northeast Ulster is imperfect. A better one was that of Carson's Ulstermen. They resisted a reasonable settlement of the Irish question because it would "extrude" them from the United Kingdom, and they prevailed because they had the sympathy of their English brethren, just as the Henleinists had the sympathy of Hitler's Germans.

There is not the slightest chance that Chamberlain will agree to the new plebiscite.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

LODGE GAINING POWER BOSTON, Oct. 24.—Henry Cabot Lodge, the tall, personable young man who is the seventh senator of the United States in a direct line of descent, is on his way to become one of the country's really powerful politicians.

His is an extraordinary success story. Six years ago, he was just turning 30, and still a newspaperman. Four years ago, he was a junior member of the "great and general court of Massachusetts," as they call their legislature here. Two years ago, he had licked the Republican reactionaries in the primary, knocked spots out of James Michael Curley in the election, and taken his senate seat. Now, still a freshman senator, he is the outstanding leader of a Massachusetts Republican party which has cast off coma and is bursting with astonishing vitality.

If Leverett Saltonstall beats Curley for Governor, as he is expected to do, Lodge will be the principal figure in a political combination like the Massachusetts junta of Federalist memory. His several times great-grandfather, George Cabot, ran the junta with Timothy Pickens, and the junta ran Massachusetts. In the current campaign Saltonstall has frankly accepted Lodge's help, and, once he is in the Governor's chair, he will maintain the alliance. And with his state administration behind him, Lodge will join the small group of certified political satraps.

MODERN MIRACLE Whether or not he becomes a satrap, Lodge's success story is worth study by every Republican leader in the country. In 1936, when Lodge ran for the senate, the Republican coma in Massachusetts had the marks of permanence. A highly industrial state, Massachusetts had been plunged into early depression by southern competition with her factories. A vast population of Irish and foreign-born were natural Democrats and the Republican party, having been captured in the twenties by a group of black Tory businessmen, had lost many thousands of followers. In 1928 the state was a Smith stronghold, and in 1932 went overwhelmingly for Roosevelt.

Yet Massachusetts Republicanism is now alive again, and, if anyone is responsible for the miracle, it is Lodge. Sweeping statements are always a mistake, and no doubt the Massachusetts Democrats, led by the unsavory Curley, have done much to discredit themselves. Lodge's part has been to convince the voters that the Republicans offer a satisfactory alternative.

CONVICTIONS AND COMMITMENTS Essentially, Lodge is a politician so practical as to verge, on occasion, on the demagogue. Watching him in action, one gets the impression that he has reduced political appeal to an exact science, and keeps a card catalogue of "baits to be tossed out at labor meetings," "kind words for elderly female supporters," and the like.

But there is more to it than that. Lodge's reactionary predecessors were muscle-bound by all sorts of convictions and commitments—convictions of the inherent wickedness of public relief, commitments against labor manufacturers, and the like. Lodge is untied by many convictions and has always made his commitments to get votes rather than financial support.

He had the wit to see his predecessors' cries of "No regimentation" and "Down with New Deal dictatorship" were making no impression on an electorate quite unconscious of being regimented, but full of lively gratitude for the tangible benefits of the New Deal. And, being unhampered by convictions, commitments against pleasure-chasing, yet he is also ready to justify himself on perfectly serious grounds. He quotes the remark of old Joe Chamberlain, who transformed the British Tories from a party of reaction to one of compromise, that "social legislation is the ransom that society pays for its own security." Like Ken Simpson in New York, he thoroughly believes that it will be healthy for the country if the Republican party becomes a party of compromise.

HAPPY ACCIDENT Until a few months ago, it was possible to regard Lodge as an accident. When your correspondents recorded his success in making the senate Democrats unhappy, he had not proved himself back home. He has now done so. And the most extraordinary thing is that the old-line Republicans, who distrusted him up to last summer, are now convinced that he is on the right track. As one hard-boiled organization man here put it: "We found we couldn't win elections the old way, and while I guess there's a lot of us don't like some of these new ideas, we'd a sight rather put them into practice ourselves than let the other side do it worse." That means not only that Lodge has been successful, it means that his kind of Republicanism is successful.

Book

And Screen.

It has long been a debatable point as to whether it is better to first read a book and then see the screen version of its story, or to see the picture first and read afterwards.

Sunday morning we all went to a preview of "The Citadel," made from A. J. Cronin's great novel of the same name. We had read the book and occupied the time before the picture started—wonder why it was nearly 15 minutes late beginning?—with naming various players we thought would fit the various roles in the novel.

As it turned out, Donat made a grand "Andrew." He depicted the character just as we had pictured him while reading and the performance was ideal. Rosalind Russell as the "Christine" was not quite so satisfactory. Somehow she didn't fit our imagined "Christine" and then, too, she didn't seem to rise to the opportunity. But it was all right, her performance, at that.

The Story

Is Superb.

The story, both in printed page and screen, is superb. The picture follows the plot closely enough for there to be no violation of the decencies and the central theme is closely paralleled. It is for the sake of those who have never read nor seen it, as yet, the story of a young doctor, who starts his career as assistant to a doctor in a coal mining town in South Wales. He is devoted to his profession, but goes astray later in the story when he lets desire for wealth replace his enthusiasm for science and healing. But he comes back, at the end, and steps out of his false role as a fashionable physician of London's West End, and is tremendously pleased by the resurgence of the real Andrew.

There are scenes in the picture that will bring emotion from anyone. Take that case, early in the story, where he is closely paralleled in the apparently stillborn babe. There's a thrill and a punch in that scene, commonplace though it may be, that has rarely been equalled. And his words, as he leaves the house—"Thank God I'm a doctor," are tremendous in the drama.

The blowing up of the sewer that is spreading typhoid, the scene in the coal mine when Andrew has to amputate a miner's arm, caught beneath fallen rocks, are other great moments in the book, by the way, that are amputation is done without anesthesia. The picture isn't so brutal.

There is a toning down, in the picture, of the criticism of the orthodox medical profession, which is found much more emphatically, in the book. Probably as well, it isn't so comforting to read some of the exposures found in the book. I do hope there aren't many doctors like Friedman and Sir Charles Ivory and other book characters. To say nothing of the small fry who satisfy humble patients with bottles of colored water labeled "medicine."

The Service

Of the Screen.

With such a story as this the picture is a very valuable service. It brings to a wider audience a story that, while great just as entertainment, is greater far for the lesson it painlessly teaches.

I don't think anyone can see "The Citadel" and not be a finer man, or woman, thereafter. It makes you leave the theater with a better understanding of what ever your job may be, and a greater determination to serve by doing that job to the utmost of your ability.

It makes a man understand that the important thing is the service he performs, not the amount of pay he gets for it.

You can't imagine any man imbued with the sort of enthusiasm and interest in his profession, or his work, that was Andrews, working at a maximum and minimum on hours or wages.

No matter what his job. And isn't it true that the only way to real, worthwhile success, is through such enthusiasm and such interest?

There are few places in life where clock watching is important. Maybe for timekeepers and schedule makers on railroads and for radio announcers. But not for the average among us.

See if you don't get a touch of Andrews' enthusiasm for the job after you see "The Citadel." It comes, soon, to Loew's Grand theater.

Twenty-Five

Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Saturday, October 25, 1913:

"The stage is set and the actors, the football eleven of the University of Georgia and Virginia await their cue, the referee's whistle, to dash into action in the center of the field at Ponce de Leon park this afternoon."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Thursday, October 25, 1888:

"A spelling bee for the benefit of the Marietta Street mission is in the course of preparation. It will be held some day next week. Webster's old 'Blue Back' speller will be the authority, and many of the elderly gentlemen of the city will participate. Lots of fun is expected."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Used to NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The simplest cure for the fears of those who think a great program of armament for this country would develop an aristocratic and warlike officer caste is to eliminate the word "gentlemen" from the 95th article of war. This article was lifted bodily from the British articles 150 years ago. The British had adopted it long before that, when the word "gentlemen" had a little meaning which has been lost by now.

There are no more democratic institutions in this country than the military and naval institutions within themselves. But, despite their internal democracy, under which the son of a four-star general enjoys no advantages over the son of a man with lime in his hod carrier's boots, the course does contrive to instill in the young gentlemen, as they are called, a strong sense of the social unreachability of the man in the ranks and the social unreachability of the enlisted man's wife in relation to the officer's wife.

The theory holds that an officer is a gentleman and that an enlisted man is of a lower social order. It may not often explain the meaning and effect of all this, but it is apparent throughout the life of the services. In service emergencies officers and men become human beings with no human distinction, and the lawful obedience of the officer commands obedience not because the officer's finer features but because he is authorized to command.

Artificial

Segregation

But, in other times, the officer is a gentleman and the enlisted man is of a lower social order. It may not often explain the meaning and effect of all this, but it is apparent throughout the life of the services. In service emergencies officers and men become human beings with no human distinction, and the lawful obedience of the officer commands obedience not because the officer's finer features but because he is authorized to command.

The tradition endowed the officer with an indefinable social superiority which he and the public knew he did not necessarily possess or feel. The public, however, instinctively felt that somehow an officer ought to be superior.

The French were much more democratic. Their officers have authority, but a general entering a room will click his heels and salute all present in a gesture of politeness, nothing more, and a buck private is not expected even to look up. American and British officers of the higher ranks at least—feel that they lose something of dignity and authority (perhaps that it is ungentlemanly) to frequent the haunts of enlisted men. It might be so in the event that the false distinction emanating from the word "gentleman" has driven the enlisted men—or "the people," as they are called in the navy—to questionable places.

This Would

Be Worse

But worse than the preservation of the word "gentlemen" in the 95th article would be the institution of social or political commissars to supervise the regularity of the commissioned enlisted soldier. That remedy was used in Russia and later in Spain, and it is obvious that it must create a corps of snitchers who undermine the legal authority of the men with responsibility and appeal of their whining shyster nature of every guardhouse lawyer in the command. Authority would be destroyed and discipline with it. Anyone with any experience under the Wagner act and the scuttle-but agitators who have thrived under its protection can foresee that.

In the old British army—in the guards particularly—the wives of the enlisted men traditionally did the washing for the families of the officers. Education and the march of democracy have advanced the British enlisted man some distance from his social degradation, but he still is legally the social inferior of the officer. In the American armed forces social distinctions persist, which, if they do not violate legal force at least have equivalent force derived from tradition and habit.

In an army of intelligent men social distinctions are vicious and detrimental to the service. The distinctions go far beyond the mere preservation of respect for legal authority. From custom they persist in degrading the enlisted man to a low position and exalting officers to a status which to them is false, uncomfortable and often ludicrous to the very men whom it is intended to give an impression of dignity.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE MOST PLEASANT ASSIGNMENT Not so long ago one of the country's best reporters, Mr. Beverly Smith, arrived in our town on what I am sure was the most pleasant assignment in all the history of reporting.

Mr. Smith had been assigned to eat his way over the United States and to gather on his gastronomic tour the best recipes encountered in homes and in restaurants. It was my pleasure to escort Mr. Smith about Atlanta and to sit him down where the arts of the trencherman were an asset.

Now comes a book from Mr. Smith. He and his wife have written a book about their tour and in it are all the recipes they collected from every section of the United States. The book is called "Through the Kitchen Door" and is, I am sure, the first and only cook book compiled by a working reporter.

Mr. Smith was a scientist. He approached his food with enthusiasm, but also with care and with great moral strength. He did not wish to extend himself or to broaden himself in any material sense, by travel. I introduced Mr. Smith to turnip greens cooked with the proper amount of ham hock. I sat him down to corn-pie, with pumpkin pie, with waffles and chicken hash, with broiled chicken and, at last, with a salad which a Frenchman at Nashville, Tenn., made famous at the famous old Faucon restaurant, closed now these many years. That salad, incidentally, occupies a place in the book. It is a book of travel and a cook book.

There is never a month without one or more nationally circulated magazines carry stories by Mr. Smith, but this cook's tour of America remains the oddest and at the same time most pleasant assignments ever given a reporter.

HEREDITARY COOKS OF THE SOUTH

I liked what Mr. Smith had to say in his introduction to southern cooking. He wrote: "It (southern cooking) has in it the cunning seasoning of the French through the Huguenots of Charleston and the French families of Louisiana; the fire of Spain, drifting up from New Orleans and Mexico; and the magic of the African, with his exchanged and blended, in the old days, by the intermarriage of family visiting among the plantations."

"The colored cooks of the south are the only hereditary cooks of America, comparable with the great cooking families of France and Austria. In America the white cook, if a man, yearns to tell autos; if a woman, dreams of opening a beauty parlor. This is well for ambition, but hell on seasoning."

"The colored cook, for better or worse, intends to cook all her life, and likes it, and raises her girl to do the same. In this way a lore and a tradition are perpetuated. But something else is necessary. The colored cook cannot and will not cook well unless she has a mistress who understands and appreciates her. She is temperamental. She must be flattered, scolded, cajoled, and made much of when she works her miracles. She must be permitted certain tyrannies of her own. This requires as subtle an art by the mistress as by the cook. The two must work together. It is when you have this team, working harmoniously and happily together, that you learn how good southern cooking can be."

"Our task of searching out the good things of the south was lightened and made pleasant by the attitude of the southerners. They like food and know how to talk about it with a fine fervor. In some parts of America, let us confess, the citizens regarded this hungry gregarious of ours as extravagant and possibly immoral. Not so in the south. Here the people, one and all, regarded our tour with enthusiasm. They wished they could go with us. They went to an unending trouble to help us."

That is the introduction to southern culinary adventures by Mr. and Mrs. Smith. I recall I did want to go with them. I was leaving for New Orleans and we talked about the Creole oyster dishes and the crawfish gumbo until we worked up a tremendous appetite.

33,000 MILES AND 12 MONTHS They traveled 33,000 miles, did the Smiths, in search of all the favorite and traditional dishes of America.

Their conclusion is interesting: "A good kitchen is in truth a studio—a benevolent stronghold of creative activity, a balance wheel to social humors, family life, even to political creeds. We would willingly bet our hats, bought new as recently as 1931, that Adolf Hitler is unaware of the tranquil joys of lounging and appreciative reflection within a well-groomed and bona fide kitchen; that Benito Mussolini, with all his touted vegetarianism, couldn't qualify as an able critic of a water-cress and tomato salad. We have never shared a table with General Franco; but from our best friend Britain's own Neville Chamberlain may be an outgrowth of soggy kidney pies with outrageous side servings of rank rhubarb sauces and Birds' custards. He looks like such a man."

"Perhaps democracy really begins in the kitchen. Perhaps dictatorships and totalitarianism generally really begin at the sign of the greasy spoon."

"If perfection is a far-fetched superlative. But an almost perfect salad, a meat pie, or roast cut, or lobster stew, or any one of a thousand other great dishes can become a creative attainment of first rank. . . . For food remains the staff of life, and good food eaten moderately, usually proves to be an open sesame to a good life."

The story of the assignment makes good reading. And since a man wrote the book, I think those gentlemen who fancy themselves amateur cooks, might like this book as much as the real cooks. Between them they should make of it a best seller.

First Bind the Strong Man and Then He Will Spoil His House

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

While the bully of Europe kept the world in dread of instant war, discussion of the situation by our people usually ended with the words: "Thank Heaven, We Live in America!"

We feel safe. Despite our several conflicts with European powers and our armed adventures in Asia, we feel secure and unafraid behind the bulwark of the oceans.

Secure we might be, if we were wise. Enemy planes might bomb our cities, but military men are agreed that it is no longer possible to transport an army across the seas to invade and conquer a nation armed with modern weapons.

But we are not safe, for we have no protection against the one weapon that can ruin and destroy us. The very freedom in which we rejoice makes us more vulnerable than any other land. The rights we cherish will tie our hands while enemies strike us. Wilson used the weapon when he appealed to the German people over the head of their Kaiser. Now both Communist and Fascist powers use it to open the way for conquest. It is the weapon of propaganda—the ancient and dastardly trick of entering a strong man's house in the innocent guise of good will and secretly turning his family against him.

No fleet or army or air force can prevent invasion by enemy ideas. Like a generous man whose friends abuse his kindness, our land, by granting freedom to all alike, protects and encourages the rogues and fools who would destroy it. It is the fatal weakness of democracy.

Fascist and Communist lands, using the new weapon against us, are like men in armor attacking one who has no armor. They are safe from propaganda, for they control the press and the radio. No body can reach their people with an idea. No one inside their borders can attempt it and live.

But here in our free land, protected by our laws, the enemy can persuade and trick our people and then use them as tools to wreck their institutions.

Prominent Catholics Study New Teaching Methods

Three leaders in the field of religious education discussed new methods of teaching secular subjects yesterday morning at the opening of the first Teachers' Institute ever held in the Catholic diocese of Savannah-Atlanta. From left to right are Most Reverend Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of the diocese; Right Reverend John J. Bonner, diocesan superintendent of schools of the archdiocese of Philadelphia, and the Rev. T. J. McNamara, superintendent of schools of the Georgia diocese. Monsignor Bonner delivered the opening address of the institute.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"That it shall hold companionship with peace in peace With honor, as in war..."

Mark Sullivan thinks the world has learned from Hitler that force wins, and should have known it all along. Certainly it is no longer possible to praise the settlement at Munich as a great victory for reason and conciliation and peace. It is more possible to look upon it as a pitiful defeat of reason, conciliation and peace resulting from the peace-at-any-price philosophy which has become a sickness of the democracies. If peace could be obtained at any price, no price would be too great, true. Morality, democracy, freedom, might all be worth paying if we could be sure of peace as the reward. But it begins to appear that the opposite is true, that in paying any price we obtain no peace but only a deeper poverty in eventual war.

To agree with Mark Sullivan and Walter Lippman and Dorothy Thompson and all the others who think force wins is not to propose (any more than they do) a war between the democracies and Germany. It is to propose only a recognition of the fact that negotiation with Hitler must be backed by as much force and as much courage as Hitler has. It is to stand for a collective security that will include Hitler if he wants to come but is capable of dealing with him if he doesn't. It is to stand for reason in righting wrongs and redistributing the possessions of nations but for power and firmness and coalition against international anarchy.

It may be that no other human being in Neville Chamberlain's place at Munich would have dared do otherwise than he did. But it seems to us that history, with its advantage of hindsight, is likely to write him down as one who missed an opportunity to win enduring peace through collective action based on a balance between force rather than on a surrender to force. History will say, it seems to us, that his eagerness for peace robbed him of the firmness and nerve that might have really won peace.

The world can't go on this way much longer, all agree. It can't go on building armament against armament. There isn't enough reserve of wealth to hold the pace. The crackup will come in the form either of war or revolution. But not even the peace sentimentalists propose unilateral disarmament. The need for balancing force with force is so accepted now that the premiers of France and England are hastening rearmament even as they praise the peace of Munich.

Praising Barney Baruch's suggestion that the cost of American rearmament be paid for out of taxes rather than bonds, the Birmingham News thinks that "if we could somehow be made more conscious of the price of maintaining ourselves aloof in an armed world, of supporting our splendid isolation, then we might more readily consider joining in a world-cooperative effort looking toward peace." If, rather than refusing to face the facts, our country will refuse to endure the facts, if it will accept the nature of the present world and the inevitable part it plays in that world and be determined upon relief from the smothering implications of the only leadership that can really lead away from the vicious circle will be established.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

A KINDLY DEED.

Patillo, the negro janitor at the First Baptist church, LaGrange, took Steadman Burgess, Carlyle McCoy and John Rudesal and me up on the roof garden of the beautiful meeting house the night before the evening session of the Troup County Baptist Association got under way, and from that vantage point we beheld the beautiful City of Elms silhouetted against the shades of night. I commented upon the many fine trees of LaGrange, and Patillo remarked, "Yes, sir, someone a long time ago was kind enough to plant these trees under which we find shade today."

A beautiful thought. I judge that the man or men who planted those trees has long since gone to his or their reward. They were thoughtful. They thought not merely of themselves, but of those who would come after them. And as they planned the city that was to be—its wide streets—its noble homes—its great industries—its schools and churches—they

DOODLE BUG BORED, SO GOLD HUNT ENDS

Seven Shivering Treasure Hunters Quit Digging on U. S. Reservation.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 24. (UP)—Seven shivering gold hunters gave up their search for a buried treasure on the San Antonio military reservation today because a "doodlebug" recorded no gold near their diggings.

They placed more faith in the "doodlebug" than in a negro's story. The six voluntary companions of Frank Shepperd, negro, who claimed to have found a treasure on the reservation 21 years ago, stood in the cold mud of a small creek today anxiously watching Warner Falkenstein of Taylor, who went over the site with his "gold finding instrument."

"Boys, it's no use," he told the discouraged group. "There's no gold here."

The party packed up and went back to their homes at Taylor with 15 1-2 hours remaining of the 72 given them by the federal government.

THOMAS F. RYAN 2ND IS SUED FOR DIVORCE

CASPER, Wyo., Oct. 24.—(UP) Mrs. Mayme Masters Ryan, estranged wife of Thomas Fortune Ryan II, heir to tobacco millions, today filed suit for divorce.

thought to plant trees, and now many find strength as the rest beneath the shade of these trees. You can never tell when you do an act. Just what the result will be; But with every deed you are sowing a seed. Though its harvest you may not see. Each kindly act is an acorn dropped. In God's productive soil; Though you may not know, yet the tree will grow. And shelter the brows that toil.

Jesus went about doing good—speaking a kindly word to a drooping heart—giving a lift to a burdened back—helping humanity bear the yoke. His example may well evoke our constant effort to make this a better, a happier world in which to live. If it be the planting of a tree, building a hospital, providing a home for helpless little children, opening a well of cool, refreshing water—whatever we may do as the days go by that will minister to those who shall come after us, remembering the while that we find rest beneath the trees that kindly hands planted along our pathway.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 5 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start sagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. CATHOLIC URGES MORAL TRAINING

Nuns Told of Their Responsibility in Teaching of the Modern Child.

Black and gray-clad nuns listened attentively yesterday morning as the Right Reverend Monsignor John J. Bonner, of Philadelphia, stressed the importance of religious education at the opening session of the first Teachers' Institute ever held in the diocese of Savannah-Atlanta.

Monsignor Bonner, diocesan superintendent of schools of the archdiocese of Philadelphia, pointed out that religious instruction is needed today as never before. With the disintegration of Christianity, he said, children begin school without the moral training that formerly was instilled into them by their parents. The result, he remarked, is that a set of conventions is the entire moral equipment of the average modern American child.

Their Responsibility. Governments, he said, spend millions on their schools annually to make good citizens, yet partially fail, as public and state schools enforce no system of moral training. What in the way of moral good, he asked, can be learned from the study of geography, mathematics and kindred subjects?

Monsignor Bonner told the nuns, teachers in parochial schools of north and central Georgia, that in these days of changing, unstable values, it was their responsibility to their pupils, the church and the nation to instill in their students respect for the laws of God and man, and therefore respect for lawfully constituted authority.

He especially urged them to develop the best possible type of Americans, ones with belief in and respect for democratic institutions. "You must be so jealous of democracy," he said, "that you are permeated with it. You must appreciate it, and teach appreciation. You must not be the ultra type of teacher who sneers at some of our fine old traditions, but you must realize the importance of the institution itself, and teach respect for it."

"Voting a Privilege." "You must teach your students that voting is a privilege, not to be neglected or abused," he concluded. Others who spoke yesterday were Bishop Gerald P. O'Hara, of the Savannah-Atlanta diocese; Father T. J. McNamara, of Milledgeville, diocesan superintendent of schools; Paul D. Williams, of Richmond, Va., and Miss W. S. Baron, of Chicago.

one of the world's oldest professions and that in days gone by barbers also served as surgeons and dentists. Today they are steadily at work in an effort to raise the standards of their work so that they can be classified as professionals instead of domestics. "And we are making real progress," declared C. The convention opened yesterday with the general president, Alden Warmelin, of Chicago, in charge, and will close after a final business session tomorrow morning for the election and installation of new officers.

A business session this morning and a banquet at the Henry Grady hotel tonight are the only meetings scheduled for today.

GIRL KILLED HERSELF, MAN TELLS OFFICERS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—(UP) Carl E. Weber told police tonight that Claudia Huebler, 22, killed herself with his pistol while he was showing her card tricks in her apartment. Weber, credit man for a Whittier, Cal., clothing firm, was being held on suspicion of murder while police made an investigation of Miss Huebler's death, which they listed as a suicide. An inquest will be held Wednesday, after which police expected to decide whether Weber would be released.

DeKalb Policemen Warn Pranksters

Similar warnings already have been issued by Atlanta and Fulton county police.

EARLY WAGE BILL TEST IS FORESEEN BY SENATOR THOMAS

Solon Who Assisted in Writing Act Predicts Court Okay.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Senator Elbert D. Thomas, who taught constitutional law before assisting in drawing up the wage-hour bill, said today he expected opponents of the measure to waste no time in testing it in the courts.

The former University of Utah professor, who guided the bill through the senate and was chairman of the joint house-senate committee of 14, said "if there is a desire to knock this bill out, court action probably will come tomorrow."

Fair Trial.

"If, however, there is a sincere desire to give the measure a fair trial, such a test will come only after all possibilities have been exhausted."

Thomas predicted, however, that because the committee "worked slowly and in accordance with what we considered the best constitutional principles," the bill can stand a court test. In the event it should be found faulty in some particular, "we can correct it when congress meets in January."

Important Legislation.

Thomas, in an interview, described the bill which places a ceiling of 44 hours on the employee's week and a floor of 25 cents per hour on his wage as the "most important piece of legislation of the administration, with the possible exception of social security, and far more important than NRA which failed to meet its test in court."

"This bill was designed to help those workers who cannot help themselves. It is more lenient than was NRA and is closer to American constitutional habits. People generally support its objectives. There are no harsh labor features, and collective bargaining, which caused difficulty under NRA, has already been brought about."

Bill Breakdown.

"If we break this bill down, I think there will be no test of its child labor features. Neither should there be a test of the wage situation. If there is a test of the hour provision, it should not come until all possibilities of the law have been exhausted."

Thomas said he expected the bill would not upset industry in any way "and what changes in industry are necessary will be made quite gradually."

"In fact," he expected that states will pass supplementary laws, making of the new wage-hour bill a pace setter."

FEE ORDERS NAME ATHENS COMPANIES

Two Must Halt Receipt or Payment as Brokers.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The Federal Trade Commission ordered the Webb Crawford Company and the Daniel Brokerage Company, both of Athens, Ga., today to discontinue the payment or receipt of brokerage fees in violation of the Robinson-Patman act.

The order also named five companies selling commodities to the Webb Crawford Company through the Daniel Brokerage Company. They were Godchaux Sugars, Inc.; J. Aron & Co., Inc.; and Myles Salt Company, Ltd., all of New Orleans; Charles F. Cates & Sons, Inc.; Faison, N. C.; and Morton Salt Company, Chicago.

The commission held the brokerage company was under the control of the Webb Crawford Company, and therefore did not render any service to sellers. It said both firms operated in the same building.

The order said payment of fees to a broker upon purchases of a buyer possessing power of control over the broker was a violation of the act.

Director of Garden School Prefers the Best

Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown, director of The Constitution's fall garden school, which opens this morning at 10 o'clock at the Woman's Club auditorium, went on an inspection tour of Brownlee & Lively dairy yesterday just to make certain for herself that her grandchild got the best milk offered. She returned home praising the Brownlee & Lively milk.

Growing in the garden of Mrs. Crown in Decatur is a rare shrub, the Cotoneaster Franchetti, which came from Hastings' nursery. Admiring the shrub are Mrs. Crown and Nelson Crist, manager of Hastings' landscape department.

Working in her garden has tended to make Mrs. Crown realize more than ever before the need of a good laundry. Here she is inspecting the latest equipment for blocking boucle knit suits at the Superior Laundry. Explaining the workings of the re-dye equipment is Miss Eunice Austin.

DEWEY 'UNWORTHY,' LEHMAN DECLARES

Charges Racket-Buster With Unwarranted Attacks on F. D. R., Smith.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 24.—(UP)—Governor Herbert Lehman, in the most fighting speech of his campaign for re-election, tonight termed Thomas E. Dewey, his Republican opponent, as "unworthy" for the governorship.

Lehman, speaking at an Albany Democratic rally, charged Dewey, famed racket-busting district attorney of New York county, with unwarranted attacks on "the good faith, honesty of purpose and independence of Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt and myself as governors." He asserted Dewey referred to Lehman's "Democratic predecessors and myself as 'front men for corrupt political machines.'"

"When Mr. Dewey attacks the good faith, honesty of purpose and independence of Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt and myself as governors of this state, I say that it is a gesture absolutely unworthy of a man who aspires to the high office of governor, and I say that without qualification," he asserted.

Directing his attack personally at Dewey, he added: "Let me tell you, Mr. Dewey, what I know the people of the state fully realize—that Governor Smith and Governor Roosevelt accomplished more for clean, decent and independent government in each year of their several terms of office than you have accomplished during your entire lifetime: They did so quietly, with dignity and without the blare of trumpets of self-stimulated publicity."

DEWEY ASSAILS 'RACKETEER BOSSES'

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(UP)—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for Governor, charged tonight that the O'Connell political machine in Albany county is "filled with racketeers" who dominate the area's political and to some extent economic life.

"Who are the bosses of Albany?" he asked in a state-wide broadcast. "First, Lawyer Ed O'Connell is the front man. Then there's Dan O'Connell, a sporting man, who boasts some of the best fighting cocks in the state. Twice convicted, Dan is the actual boss of Albany. He is high in the councils of the ruling political machine of the state of New York."

Dewey charged that the Hedrick Brewery, owned by the O'Connells, dominates the city to the extent that few saloon keepers care to sell other beers, fearing that they might lose their licenses. He who sells nothing but Hedrick's, he added, "gets his license renewed without a hitch and can have slot machines, hostesses, music and dancing."

Governor Herbert H. Lehman, Democratic candidate, Dewey repeated, "is sick of being Governor."

GIBBINS TO INSPECT BUILDING AT BENNING

COLUMBUS, Ga., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Major General Henry Gibbins, quartermaster general of the army, will arrive at Fort Benning tomorrow afternoon, post authorities have been informed.

General Gibbins is making the visit for the purpose of inspecting construction activities now in progress at the infantry school.

with "General Fall Garden Work." Practically every phase of garden work will be taken up at this session, including preparation of the soil and cultivation of roses, bulbs, seed flowers, shrubs, grass and other plants.

Mrs. Donald Hastings, past president of the Garden Club of Georgia, will introduce Mrs. Crown at the last meeting.

Accessory changes will hold the spotlight at the fashion review Thursday morning. Models will show how costumes can be completely changed by a switching of accessories.

Models in the fashion show will be Mrs. Loraine Belmont, Mildred Barron, Frances Evans, Louise Courtney, DeEtte Duren, Flora Morris, Johnnie Mac Nichols, Vivian Richardson and Marion and Mildred Hollingsworth.

Garden school classes will be over at 11:30 o'clock each morning.

Sponsors of the school are Sears, Roebuck & Company, Sterchi Bros., Hastings Seed Company, Davison-Paxon Company, Rich's, F. Representatives discussed with the administrator and his legal aides the possibility that the industry might be exempt on the ground that many plants were in the "area of production," a region in which congress provided for exemption of the "first-processing" of agricultural and horticultural products.

Andrews referred the problem to Calvert Magruder, his chief legal counsel. The administrator intimated that a decision might be expected within a week but he declined to discuss the merits of the case.

Carolinas Lose Jobs.

Previously, Paul Sifton, deputy administrator, had announced that the wage-hour administration had decided tentatively that the pecan-shelling industry was covered by the act unless the shelling was done on a farm, or was in conjunction with a farming operation.

80,000 JOBS LOST; WAGE ACT BLAMED

figure quoted does not apply to them," Mr. Durham told The Constitution. "The situation is different, however, in the smaller mills."

"Most of the Georgia seamless hosiery mills are very old and use the oldest sort of equipment to produce the cheapest kind of hose. The demand for this type of product is not high, the price is extremely low, and necessarily these factors affect the wage levels. The skill required of operators is not as high as in the full-fashioned mills."

At Macon, John McElreath of the Jefferys-McElreath Manufacturing Company revealed his firm had suspended operation of 20 of its rural sawmills, affecting between 400 and 500 men, while in the Savannah area an additional 500 such workers were deprived of jobs.

Perry sawmills were closed, releasing 142 men, while at Madison a pay roll of 200 persons was discontinued. One shift of a lumber mill in Roberta was dispensed with.

Enforcement Quarters.

Enforcement headquarters for southern textile and men's clothing industries were opened yesterday in the Atlanta National building. Announcement of the opening was made by Clyde M. Mills, southern director of the Amalgamated Clothing Union, and R. R. Lawrence, who serves in a like capacity for the Textile Workers' Organization Committee.

Both issued a statement urging all workers in these lines to consult the office for provisions and interpretations of the law. The statement stressed that labor would co-operate in fulfillment of the measure and that the law imposed duties alike upon employers and employees.

For the public benefit it was announced by W. H. Schroder, manager of the Atlanta office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, that he had copies of the law available at five cents each. The office is on the third floor of the new postoffice building.

Sawmill operators around Macon agreed an increase of $3 or $4 a thousand feet for lumber would be necessary if they are to keep going.

Members of the Southern Pine Association in New Orleans said they were not advised of any shutdowns specifically because of the new law.

Alabama Mills Close.

Four small lumber mills in Tuscaloosa county, Alabama, shut down and others were reported contemplating this move.

Georgia's textile industry was reported making only minor adjustments to meet the statute's requirements and there seemed to be no marked repercussions in other industrial or mercantile establishments.

Administrator Andrews told reporters a public hearing probably would be held to consider protests against application of the law to the pecan-shelling industry. He added, "There are shellers who feel they can pay it and want to come under the act."

Representatives discussed with the administrator and his legal aides the possibility that the industry might be exempt on the ground that many plants were in the "area of production," a region in which congress provided for exemption of the "first-processing" of agricultural and horticultural products.

Andrews referred the problem to Calvert Magruder, his chief legal counsel. The administrator intimated that a decision might be expected within a week but he declined to discuss the merits of the case.

Andrews Says Wage-Hour Act Helps Workers and Employers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Here is an estimate of the effects of the new wage-hour law, given by Administrator Elmer F. Andrews in an interview tonight over a radio network:

Q. Should workers profit from this law right from the beginning?

A. Yes, I'd say so. A major factor in bringing the problem of basic wage and hour standards to the boiling point was, of course, the stubborn continuance of unemployment throughout the nation. This situation gave cut-throat employers an opportunity to operate on the basis of sweat-shop wages and working conditions. Fair employers were forced to compete and to cut wages or increase hours of labor. This forced government intervention for the protection of wage earners.

Q. Then wage earners undoubtedly will gain?

A. Even those not directly under the act, those in industries purely local in character, also should find themselves in a much better position as wage and hour standards become stabilized on a national basis.

Q. This (act) should aid in creating jobs?

A. It certainly should not make jobs any scarcer.

Q. How does the employer come out?

A. To justify their being paid the statutory minimum wage.

At San Antonio, Texas, Maxwell Burkitt, attorney for the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, estimated 2,500 to 3,000 piece workers were thrown out of work by the action of government manufacturers there in discontinuing the practice of allowing work to be done in homes at a rate below the minimum set by the new law.

Discussing shutdowns in southern mills and cotton textile mills, Andrews said:

"My general information is that in some cases there would be seasonal shutdowns anyhow. Unfortunately, I can't do anything about it. We can't exempt any one in interstate commerce from paying 25 cents an hour."

"Hope It's Temporary."

"I just hope it's temporary and that after all they don't really mean it."

With a broad smile, he added: "Everyone is co-operating so fine that we may have nothing to do but sit back and enjoy the industry committees."

(Upon request, Andrews may establish industry committees which have the power to recommend that he fix a higher minimum wage, for a given industry, than the general statutory one.)

Andrews announced that some state governors had agreed quickly to co-operate with his administration in enforcing the law and to attend a meeting here next month to discuss the possibility that states might enact wage-hour laws.

Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, notified Andrews that he has authorized his state labor department to employ additional inspectors to aid in enforcement work. Replies pleading co-operation also were received from Governor Rivers, of Georgia, and the states of Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Utah, Nevada, Iowa, Rhode Island and Oklahoma.

Not Retroactive.

Andrews announced that the law would not be retroactive and said that goods produced and handled at substandard wages before today did not become "outlaw" goods immediately. But, he added, workers handling such goods on and after today must be paid the statutory minimum wage.

The law fixes labor standards for industries engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce.

In general it requires a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour and the first year of its operation, a minimum of 30 cents for the next six years, and 40 cents thereafter.

For the first year it limits the work week to 44 hours—unless work beyond that period is paid at one and one-half times the regular rate. The basic work week will decline to 42 hours the second year and to 40 thereafter.

Employment of children under 18 is prohibited in hazardous industries and those under 16 cannot be employed in a manufacturing or mining occupation.

A. Oh, he, too, is much better off. His employees should gain in efficiency, as they work set hours and earn fair wages. Then, he knows that his competitors, no matter where situated in the country, must work the same hours and pay the same wages, and this eliminates one of the most reprehensible of all cut-throat practices.

Q. How does the fair labor standards act fit into the pattern of our American social legislation?

A. This wages and hours law marks another great advance in our struggle here in America with unemployment and want. It does not overlap the coverage of the other acts. We have tried to work out requirements for record-keeping which will prevent the duplication of data which employers must keep under the social security program.

Q. There seems to be a feeling that these records that you will need might be very complicated, Mr. Andrews.

A. Really the record-keeping requirements are comparatively simple. All that is needed is that an accurate record of some sort be kept showing the actual hours worked, the rate of pay, the overtime and the age and address of the employee, especially if he is a minor. We have stipulated that the records do not have to be kept in any particular form.

Q. How does the employer come out?

A. To justify their being paid the statutory minimum wage.

At San Antonio, Texas, Maxwell Burkitt, attorney for the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, estimated 2,500 to 3,000 piece workers were thrown out of work by the action of government manufacturers there in discontinuing the practice of allowing work to be done in homes at a rate below the minimum set by the new law.

Discussing shutdowns in southern mills and cotton textile mills, Andrews said:

"My general information is that in some cases there would be seasonal shutdowns anyhow. Unfortunately, I can't do anything about it. We can't exempt any one in interstate commerce from paying 25 cents an hour."

"Hope It's Temporary."

"I just hope it's temporary and that after all they don't really mean it."

With a broad smile, he added: "Everyone is co-operating so fine that we may have nothing to do but sit back and enjoy the industry committees."

(Upon request, Andrews may establish industry committees which have the power to recommend that he fix a higher minimum wage, for a given industry, than the general statutory one.)

INJURIES ARE FATAL TO HIT-RUN VICTIM

Man Struck in Almost Same Spot Where Brother Met Similar Death.

COVINGTON, Ga., Oct. 24.—Fue Fincher, 33, died in an Atlanta hospital this morning of injuries received when struck by a hit-and-run driver last night near his home on the Covington-Jackson highway.

Fincher was struck at almost the same spot where his brother was killed by a hit-and-run driver about a year ago. Police are investigating the incident, but no arrests have been made.

Fincher was not found until early this morning. Taken to the hospital he died without regaining consciousness.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in Red Oak cemetery, with burial in the Fincher cemetery, the Rev. E. C. Sweetnam officiating. Fincher is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arch Fincher; two sisters, Mrs. O. L. Parker and Mrs. W. W. Yancey, of Porterdale, and four brothers, B. B. Fincher, of Atlanta; C. A. Fincher, of Porterdale; and W. N. and Ray Fincher, of Covington.

Albany today to discuss the wage-hour bill.

The association's secretary said the act would mean wage increases for most of the women workers employed in the industry, but said the previous wage scale for men had approximated the 25-cent minimum required by law.

The Atlantic Jute Mills at Norfolk, Va., suspended operations because of the wage provision of the new law, President LeRoy Margolius announced. Approximately 120 employees, mostly negroes, were thrown out of work.

Margolius said the plant, which manufactures jute bagging for cotton bales, would not reopen "for the balance of the calendar year at least."

WESTERN UNION WILL MEET LAW

The Postal Telegraph Company said it is starting to lay off 1,000 messengers. The announcement was made by C. B. Allsopp, vice president.

GLENN TESTIFIES MOYERS DREW GUN AS DEATH THREAT

Banker Asserts Defendant
Forced Him To Hand Over
$30,000 Cash.

Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the board of the Trust Company of Georgia, was the state's star witness yesterday as the second trial of William T. Moyers, Atlanta lawyer, was begun in Judge Paul Enderidge's division of Fulton superior court.

Moyers is charged with robbing Glenn and Ernest Woodruff, Atlanta financiers, of $30,000 on November 19, 1936, at the height of excitement over a Broad street fire. Last year he was convicted of the charge and sentenced to 5 to 10 years, but won a reversal in the court of appeals.

Woodruff is expected to take the stand today against Moyers. Called to Office.

Glenn related that he was called to the office of Woodruff in the Trust Company building on the day of the robbery. Present were Moyers, Woodruff, Walter Brown, a secretary, and the late Charles Bickerstaff, he said.

"Bill Moyers says I owe him some money and will shoot me if I don't pay it," Glenn quoted Woodruff as saying. Moyers asserted he had been hired for three years at $10,000 a year as state director of the Liberty League by Woodruff and that the contract had been broken, the defendant stated in his first trial.

"Moyers told me he had been trying to collect for some time, that it was not necessary to go to the merits of the matter, and at the same time he drew a snub-nosed gun from his coat pocket," Glenn testified yesterday.

Gave Him $30,000.

"He told me I would have to get the money and directed that nothing over $20 bills should be included. He warned me against setting a trap, saying he would get me first if I did."

The banker said he obtained $30,000 and brought it back to Moyers, who, after warning again against traps, forced Glenn to walk through the door of the bank out on the street and into the crowds witnessing the fire.

Moyers went one way and he returned to the bank, Glenn said. He testified that $29,000 of the $30,000 was recovered.

Brown, the secretary, corroborated Glenn's testimony yesterday.

Henry Ford Predicts Prosperity In 1939, Points to 'Better Feeling'

People Tired of 'Isms,' Motor Manufacturer Says
in Interview.

DETROIT, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Henry Ford painted a bright picture of the business outlook in an interview today, predicting a prosperous 1939 and expressing the belief that there would be no major European war.

"The people have come to their senses and realize the futility of war," was his comment on threats of armed conflict in Europe.

He said, "The people are tired of the 'isms' that have developed in the last few years," he said. "They are getting back to work, and work spells prosperity."

The Ford Motor Company, he said, is preparing to meet increased demand with increased production.

"We plan to step up production of 1939 models well beyond the aggregate of 1938," he said, "because we know that sales generally are going to be much greater."

The Ford Company has produced approximately 462,000 units thus far in 1938. How far beyond that figure the company expects to go in 1939, Ford did not disclose.

He said, however, that, with the company's $34,000,000 expansion program nearly complete, "we are now in a position to make all the cars we can sell."

A further increase in the capacity of some of the units involved in the expansion already is planned, he disclosed. He said the tire making plant, now equipped to produce 5,000 tires a day, would be expanded so rapidly as equipment and materials become available.

He also announced that a 150,000 horsepower engine is being added to the power plant at the Rouge factory. The installation will be completed in April, he said, at a cost of $1,500,000.

The occasion for the interview was a press preview of the new Ford models.

ARAB REVOLT AIDED BY SECRET BANDS

Students Trained in American University Are Playing Important Roles.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The Arab revolt in Palestine, led by the Grand Mufti Amin Effendi Al Hussein, is only part of a broader Arab nationalist sentiment which has its roots in the past and its branches in many Arab countries.

In the growth of this sentiment, which has often burst into open warfare, secret organizations have played a large role. The first of these was founded in a room of College Hall, in the American University of Beirut, Syria, in 1878. Similar societies were organized all through the Arab world—then under the more or less effective sovereignty of the Sultan of Turkey.

One of these societies, the Al Ahd (the Covenant), has been responsible for supplying a great many of the leaders in all the Arab states.

The students trained in the American University at Beirut are playing a role in the Arab movement, some American citizens of Arab descent. One of the latter, Hanna Khalaf, a graduate of Michigan Law school, recently was appointed public prosecutor of the Arab provisional government.

The aims of the Arabs, in Palestine and in every other country in the Arab world where the nationalist movement has taken hold, are twofold: they want independence for all the Arab countries, not only of the Arab peninsula, but also in Egypt and North Africa. Then they want a federation of these Arab states, which would work together to raise the standards of living, culture and education in all the Arab world.

DALADIER WORKS TO SILENCE REDS

Will Seek United Conservatives To Replace Leftist
People's Front.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier worked today for a union of conservative parties to replace the Leftist People's Front as the governing instrument of peace.

Daladier, encouraged by the swing to the right in yesterday's elections, planned to eliminate Communists and Socialists from any voice in determining his policy aimed at collaboration with Germany and Italy.

Radical-Socialist party members who meet at Marseille October 26-30 will be called upon to proclaim the death of the People's Front, which they formed with Socialists and Communists, Daladier's friends disclosed.

Under Daladier's direction, they will proclaim it a necessity for similar union of Center and Right parties based on a program of "public safety."

They will declare the necessity for dissolution of the chamber of deputies and a call for a new election in case their "appeal" is not answered.

These duties for the party congress, conceived by Daladier and his foreign minister, Georges Bonnet, were included in a report drafted for the congress by Deputy Gaston Thiebaut.

The report implies that former Premier Leon Blum's Socialists, as the largest party in the present chamber of deputies, could support Daladier if they wished but that the premier is willing to get along without them.

Missourians see Clark differently. They tell you that his whole public life, beginning with his youthful adoration of Andrew Jackson and John Quincy Adams and of the Missouri political tradition carried on in the past by Benton, Vest, Cockrell, Stone, Reed and, above all, by his father, Champ Clark, presents an absolutely consistent pattern. Clark and not Roosevelt, they declare, is the true Democrat.

And Clark, in his present campaign, plainly has been endeavoring to sell this latter conception of himself to the home folks. Although it was conceded from the beginning that he was unbeatable for either renomination or re-election, he has campaigned as if his political life were at stake. His speeches almost always run into hours and they express his views in utmost detail on every political subject under the sun. Before the primary, he covered every nook and corner of the state, and he is repeating this process now in his fight with Henry S. Caulfield, the Republican nominee.

The best evidence of Clark's strength in Missouri perhaps is that, while he is not classed as a member of any of the conflicting Democratic machines in the state, all of them now are loudly proclaiming their support of him.

The winner will become Chile's 22nd Constitutional President in succession to Arturo Alessandri Palma, a Liberal who was elected to the Presidency for a six-year term in 1932.

$200,000 ALASKA FIRE DAMAGES WAREHOUSE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Colonel Otto F. Ohlson, general manager of the Alaska Railroad, estimated today $200,000 damage was caused by an all-night fire in the railroad's warehouse here.

Colonel Ohlson said the fire started in a work car on a siding of the government-owned railroad. A large shipment of Thanksgiving turkeys was destroyed in the blaze.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—(UP)—John Van Dusen, 57, paid-up member of the Union League club for wealthy men, told Judge William M. Lewis today that he could not pay more than $3 weekly for the support of his wife.

He said he retained membership in the league "because I can charge my meals there."

Variety in Names as Well as News Offered by Georgia's Newspapers

The Constitution One of Few With Title Not Matched by Any Other Publication in State; News, Journal,
Times and Herald Most Frequent.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Georgia newspapers apparently embrace an unlimited field for their endeavors, and their readers lack not for information if they live up to their names, according to Pledger Carmichael, Carrollton student in the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism at the University of Georgia.

Carmichael, intrigued by the names of Georgia newspapers, found there are two Suns, two Stars, and a Rising Sun. If the Stars don't give sufficient light at night, he suggests, there also is a Headlight and a Post-Searchlight.

He found Darien, one of the oldest towns in Georgia, was one of two with a Gazette, which during the early days of journalism usually meant an official paper. Tifton has the other Gazette.

Two of the Atlanta dailies, The Constitution and the Georgian, and Columbus' Ledger and Enquirer, are not duplicated elsewhere in the state. However, Carmichael's investigation disclosed a Northeast Georgian, a Southwest Georgian, a Southeast Georgian, a Georgia Southwestern, a South Georgian, and a Citizen-Georgian.

Examination of the names of Georgia newspapers showed most of the weeklies prefer to use the name of the county as a prefix, rather than that of the town in which published. Daily papers, on the other hand, use the name of the city exclusively.

News is the most popular name; Carmichael found, with 42 papers using it. Journal is second with 21, Times next with 17, and Herald fourth with 15.

The paper with the longest name is the Dublin Courier-Herald Dispatch-News, while the Sparta Ishmaelite has the distinction, perhaps, of having the oddest name. There is only one Telephone, one Forest Blade and one Local, Carmichael found.

Only one Patriot has survived, but there are three Free Presses. The Wiregrass Farmer is the only "dirt farmer" in the group, but Louisville has a News and Farmer. Hyphenated or double-names, usually resulting from consolidations or mergers, are frequent; the investigation disclosed. There is a Times-Recorder, Banner-Herald, Post-Searchlight, News-Gazette, News-Banner, Summit-Post, Tribune-News, News-Record, Advocate-Democrat, Liberal-Enterprise, Times-Journal, Progress-Argus, News-Herald, Times-Enterprise, News-Reporter, Courier-Herald Dispatch-News, and Journal-Herald.

Labor Delegate, Hands in Pockets, Shocks London in 'Gab' With King

Even Fellow Americans Made Unhappy by Unconventional Watts.

LONDON, Oct. 24. (UP)—Robert J. Watts, American labor delegate to the international labor organizations at Geneva, horrified onlookers at Buckingham Palace today by keeping his hands in his pockets while talking to King George VI.

Watts, who is secretary of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, had a five-minute audience with the King and Queen, along with several other members of the American delegation.

The others borrowed or rented silk hats and morning clothes—all though the King had told them to "come as you like"—but Watts appeared in a plain blue suit with a flaming red necktie.

He sauntered up to the King, his hands shoved in his pockets, and while experts of court etiquette squirmed, chatted with the King on American labor conditions.

Later he tossed off the affair by explaining: "Oh, I just gabbed with the King and Queen, just like I am talking with you." The King, who wore a morning suit, seemed to enjoy the talk. Later Watts went over and "gabbed" with Queen Elizabeth, but by this time someone had tipped him off and he kept his hands out of his pockets.

Even Watts' fellow delegates seemed unhappy, although there was nothing bystanders could do to get him to cool off his hands until the King walked away.

Henry Dennison, another member of the delegation who attended the audience, was heard to remark: "It's a wonder he hasn't got his hands in the King's pockets."

4 MEN, GUNS, TOOLS SEIZED IN VALDOSTA

Arrests Made by Officers Investigating Attempted Burglary.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Oct. 24. (AP)—Guns, a bottle of nitroglycerine, tools and two automobiles were confiscated today in the arrests of four men, officers said, while investigating an attempted robbery. All denied the attempt to rob a grocery store yesterday.

Deputy Sheriff R. L. McDonald and Police Chief R. L. Kemp said the bottle of the high explosive was wrapped carefully in towels. They also reported confiscating a high-powered rifle, a shotgun with buckshot ammunition, three pistols, a number of dynamite caps and fuses, a pair of bolt cutters and other tools.

The officers booked the men as George Morris and Ernest Everett, who, Deputy McDonald said, reported they escaped recently from Florida prison camps; J. W. Joyner, who said he was from Jacksonville, and Louis Wlenberg, operator of a filling station near Valdosta.

Chief Kemp is holding Weinberg for further investigation. Deputy McDonald declared he would ask federal agents if they want to prosecute Morris and Everett on charges of transporting a stolen vehicle across a state line. The deputy said he had not decided what disposition would be made of Joyner's case.

WINDSOR CASTLE IS 'BLACKED OUT'

'Bombs' Score 'Hits' in Air Raid Test.

WINDSOR, England, Oct. 24. (UP)—Historic Windsor Castle, seat of Kings since the days of William the Conqueror, was "blacked out" for 45 minutes to-night in an air-raid test.

The first "raid" on the castle, supposedly built on the site of King Arthur's meeting place with the Knights of the Round Table, resulted in "bombs" scoring figurative hits on the state apartments and the sovereign's entrance.

The castle area's 500 inhabitants, including military knights and choir singers of St. George's chapel, worked to make the "black out" effective.

Liner Plays Host To 2,000 Canaries

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. (AP)—About 2,000 canaries hitch-hiked an overnight ride on the Grace liner Santa Rosa on their mass flight from Tortugas to Crooked island in the Caribbean sea last week, passengers said on their arrival today.

The birds were described as exhausted when they descended on their midocean refuge in a fluttering cloud. So much so, that bolder ones readily accepted indulgent passengers' invitations to the dining salon. But after a night's perch on the cruise ship, they were off at dawn, like good early birds.

Stars of Films at Rhodes

Robert Taylor and Maureen O'Sullivan have the leading roles in "A Yank at Oxford," which has been brought to Rhoades theater to play through Thursday.

'YANK AT OXFORD' OPENS AT RHODES

Robert Taylor Picture Was Filmed in England.

Because many people were unable to see it during its first-run in Atlanta, "A Yank at Oxford," has been brought back by the Rhodes theater.

Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore, and a supporting cast of fine English players appear in the film.

For the filming of "A Yank at Oxford," three famous Hollywood players went to England. Many scenes were filmed at the James Denham studios, where technical experts devised an imaginary Oxford College.

Taylor appears as an athletic hero from a small middle western college who wins a scholarship to Oxford. He is cocky and self-assured and his open boasting of his athletic prowess en route to Oxford leads another undergraduate (Griffith Jones) to stage a fake reception for the new arrival.

SNYDER ARRAIGNED IN ETING SHOOTING

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24. (AP)—"Colonel" Martin (Moe) Snyder, former husband of Singer Ruth Etting, today made his first court appearance to answer three felony charges accusing him of shooting Myrl Alderman in Miss Etting's home nine days ago.

Snyder was taken from the county jail, manacled to other prisoners, to superior court where he was arraigned on charges of attempted murder, kidnapping and violation of the state gun law. He will enter his pleas Wednesday.

POUND'S DEPRECIATION TERMED NOT SERIOUS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and officials of other agencies indicated tonight that, while the cheapness of the British pound concerns them, the situation is not serious.

Morgenthau said flatly that the present pound value of $4.76 was not serious, but he told reporters he approved of articles they wrote over the week end, calling attention to the possible damage to American trade if the depreciation of the British money continued.

ITALO-BRITISH PACT IS BELIEVED NEAR

Ethiopian Conquest, Recognition of Belligerents' Rights in Spain Included.

LONDON, Oct. 24. (UP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain returned from the country today and started wheels turning which at Wednesday's cabinet meeting probably will result in formal ratification of the Anglo-Italian friendship pact and British recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Although the date on which the agreement will come into force is not yet decided, it was understood it would be during the first fortnight in November. An almost certain sequel will be granting of belligerent rights to both factions in Spain, after agreement among the governments most concerned—Britain, France, Italy and Germany and possibly Portugal.

The date of effectuation of the pact will be announced simultaneously in London and Rome. In view of Chamberlain's pledge to "allow opportunity for discussion before the pact is made effective" it was assumed that the house of commons will debate the issue beforehand.

Actual ratification by parliament is not necessary.

MOULTRIE, Ga., Oct. 24. (AP)—Sheriff T. V. Beard announced today the recapture of two of six prisoners who escaped from the Colquitt county jail last week.

He said James McClendon was retaken in Tallahassee, Fla., and Willie Darden was arrested on a night in November. An almost certain sequel will be granting of belligerent rights to both factions in Spain, after agreement among the governments most concerned—Britain, France, Italy and Germany and possibly Portugal.

MY DAY So Much Talent and So Little Genius in the World

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

OMAHA, Neb.—I have just finished a book called "Five O'Clock Whistle," by Ramona Herdman, and I think everyone will find this an interesting story. It is real life in many communities of the United States. For example, only a day or two ago, in Green Bay, Wis., the director of the NYA projects brought a young boy to see me. The boy carried three or four carvings he had made and, while I am no expert critic, one of his figures seemed very interesting. When I asked him what he wanted to do, his answer was unhesitating: "I want to go to art school." But, how is he to get there?

This, in a nutshell, is the theme of "Five O'Clock Whistle." The mother is no unusual heroine. There are many of them in countless villages and towns who forget themselves in love and hope for their children. I am afraid I closed the book with a sigh, for it is true that there is much talent in the world, but comparatively little genius. I wonder if the girl who made her belated decision to stick to the boy, proved strong enough to be the wife of a genius or the prop to a man who had to give up his hopes and change his career?

In Green Bay, Wis., I was given a book called "Alluring Wisconsin," by Fred L. Holmes. It is a readable book made doubly interesting by the very delightful photographs. One has a desire to go to see all of its pretty spots, and if ever I have the time, I think I shall take a car and go exploring in Wisconsin.

We had a little time in Chicago, and dined very pleasantly with some friends before taking the train for Lawrence, Kan. The University of Kansas offers its young art students a laboratory which, I think, would be rather hard to duplicate. The collections I had time to glance at in their museum were so beautiful and interesting I longed to spend hours there, instead of a scant few minutes. The Glee Club chose the museum as the place to sing for me, and the combination of the setting and the young men's voices made it a really stirring occasion.

We stopped for a few minutes at a girls' dormitory run on a co-operative plan where $15 a month covers all living expenses and where, at the same time, the girls receive excellent training in housekeeping. To remain in the house they must have better than a "B" average in their school work. This means that the leaders of the future are probably going through on this basis.

We had a very pleasant lunch with the members of the board of the Women's City Club, which sponsored the lecture, and a very delightful dinner with Chancellor and Mrs. Lindley. It is always a joy to see Senator Capper and Mr. and Mrs. William Allen White, and we were glad to find Mrs. Huxman, wife of the Governor of Kansas, there also.

We made the train back to Kansas City in our evening clothes, and my chief occupation was signing autographs for my fellow passengers. The night train brought us from Kansas City to Omaha, Neb., this morning.

"Girls, Heed Mother's Advice," Warns Friendly Counselor

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I am almost 20 and am in love with a man 30. He has been married before and is divorced. However, knowing all the circumstances of his former marriage, I find it doesn't alter my feeling for him in the least. My parents are opposed to our marriage because of his previous marriage but I don't see why this should make any difference to them since we love each other. After all, don't we all make mistakes? Aren't my parents narrow in wanting to deprive this man of another chance at happiness which he really deserves? Should I disregard the opposition of what I think is my best since I am certain I cannot be happy without him?

ALICE H.

Answer:

I'm not advising any 19-year-old girl to disregard her parents' opposition to her marriage with a divorced man ten years her senior. I'm advising her to go slowly, listen to her parents, let them investigate the circumstances of the man's marriage and divorce before she plunges her troth to him.

Yes, we all make mistakes, but the trouble is as far as love and marriage are concerned we usually go right on making the same mistakes, never profiting by our experiences. This is the reason why so many people who get one divorce, get a second and sometimes a third. They just can't learn to lay off the things that bring talk and more talk, fight and finally separation and divorce.

It's not likely, either, that a man will lay all the cards on the table to the girl he's courting concerning a former marriage and divorce, certainly not if he's been in the wrong and she's an adoring, trusting young thing who looks up to him as though he were a piece off the moon. Her parents have much better chance to find out the truth from disinterested parties than she has of learning it from the interested party.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I want to say a word in response to your article on the satisfaction and financial profit wives derive from working at home rather than in the business world. The mother of a small family as well as a large one can fill her time, if she does all that's to be done, as I know from experience, and make it pay in dollars and cents. I am sure the actual cash saved by my gardening and canning is quite an item on our year's books. Mending and darning, even though it's boring and isn't done any more, is a time consumer and it certainly pays in the long run. A friend of mine who has a talent for sewing, says she saves a large amount of money by cutting down the older children's clothes to fit the younger ones and in spare time she also does needle work which she sells for a profit.

Brought up on the adage that a dollar saved is a dollar earned, I have helped my husband by saving and it has been amazing to me what inventions necessity mothers. There's great gratification in this home labor and a self-sufficiency is developed, too, which is pleasant. I'm convinced that most women can find outlets for their energies and their talents at home if they are willing to forego the excitement of the business world. I believe also that domestic happiness and contentment are highest where wives earn by working and saving in their own homes.

Lillian Mae's "Peppy" Kiddie Style

Behold a bright, young, easy-to-make frock designed with an eye to the future—since Pattern 4889 is everything a "four to twelve" could desire as a Thanksgiving and Christmas-party frock (as well as for immediate wear at school). At the adorable bolero-effect line, metal buttons are a decidedly fetching note—while the eight-gore skirt "swings" just like grown-ups, allowing plenty of room for active young legs. Instead of choosing the Peter Pan collar, you might have a square neck that's equally sweet—and instead of doing the frock in one bright print or flannel, you might let the top contrast. A party-going dress will be attractive with puff-sleeves—then for an everyday frock, the long sleeves are oh-so-cozy!

Pattern 4889 is available in children's sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 takes 2 yards 36-inch fabric. Send 15c in coin for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly, name, address and style number. Send for your copy of Lillian Mae's Winter Pattern Book—and pick the style "finds" of the season for your new wardrobe! Exercise Alone Strengthens Muscles

By Ida Jean Kain.

Women blame too much on their children. So many letters say, "I used to have a lovely figure before my baby arrived, but ever since then I have been flabby and my measurements have not gone down."

True enough, you probably did have a lovely figure until the children began to come, but you didn't need to lose it. Look at the Hollywood figures! Some of the most beautiful stars have had children, and yet these film mothers resumed their careers looking lovelier than ever.

The difference between their figures and yours probably is in the fact that they exercised. Stretched muscles do not regain their tone without some effort on your part. Moreover, stretched muscles tend to become flabby and to take on fat, and within two months your figure may be worse than immediately following the arrival of the baby.

Wearing the correct girdle is a help, but it is only an auxiliary measure. It does nothing toward toning the muscles, nor does it prevent the accumulation of fat. A good girdle will prevent your becoming overtired, but you must exercise to strengthen the muscles.

Another valuable auxiliary measure is the uplift bra, but here again you must have exercise for the stretched muscles—in this case, the pectorals supporting the bust.

You can begin exercise very soon after the baby arrives. Doctors now agree that extremely mild exercises may be started during the first two weeks, while you are still in bed. Special exercises of this type are contained in the leaflet, "After the Baby Comes." You should not, of course, exercise at this time without your doctor's approval.

But, even if you lost your figure 10 years back, it is never too late to regain those slim lines. You may have to exercise for some months before you notice any marked improvement, but you can have as slim and lovely a figure as you ever had. Here is an exercise for both the pectoral and the abdominal muscles:

Position: Lying flat on the back, knees bent and feet on the floor, arms down at sides or floor. Movement: Draw the small of the back in to touch the floor and, inhaling, raise the arms without lifting them from the floor until they stretch high overhead. Then, exhaling, lower the arms back down to the sides and relax the muscles of the abdomen and lower back.

Speech Errors Create Social Barriers

Popular Marjorie—you see her at the best places. But clever Marjorie, too! She's learned if you want to fit in with the best your speech must fit in as well. Out-of-place at a country club is a girl who says "Who's that party sitting beside that kind of thin girl?"

Such talk sounds like a savage language to those who correctly say "Who's that person sitting beside that rather thin girl?"

In a well-bred group at a football game eyebrows would be raised at the girl who carols "As I says to Joe, State has plenty good players. We had ought to win!"

Her errors grate on the ears of cultured people who say "As I said to Joe, State has plenty of good players. We ought to win."

And he'd invite to glamorous dances the girl who sighs "Let's set this out, I'm most ready to drop." No partner is she for men of background, used to girls who say "Let's sit this out, I'm almost ready to drop."

What social barriers those speech errors create! Yet when you think about them you realize the differences between the talk of insiders and outsiders are really little ones, easy to check and correct.

Quickly you can find out if you offend with such errors as across, those kind, leave it be. Develop the speech that attracts, practice correct forms daily, across with the t, that kind, let it be.

Talk confidently wherever you go. Our 40-page booklet, Com-

Atlanta's own lovely Dixie Dunbar has a part in the screen version of the Broadway hit, "Idiot's Delight." Her last movie role was in "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Dixie Dunbar Feels Blonde Wig Is Unnecessary in "Idiot's Delight"

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24.—Dixie Dunbar will be one of the six chorus girls in the movie "Idiot's Delight," but Dixie is sore because she will have to wear a blonde wig. "I can be just as dumb as a brunette—but try telling the producers that," she complained to me. . . . Earl Carroll's dine-and-dance emporium will be titled "The Inner Circle." The stars will sit, smile and chew on raised platforms while their dotting admirers watch from below. The said dotting admirers can only watch—no food will be served them!

Cecil B. DeMille assembled all the feminine workers stars, stand-ins, script girls, hairdressers, etc.—of his new epic, "Union Pacific," and told them, "If you wish to work for me, you must never wear slacks, never use red varnish on your nails, or let them grow beyond the finger tip." Husband and boy friends have been trying for years without success to get their womenfolk to abandon that red polish. It took a Cecil B. DeMille to perform the miracle.

When Martha Raye returned from that honeymoon trip with David Rose, she found their new home unfinished—in spite of the usual promises of the builders. So the first marital meal was eaten from paper plates, and sitting on boxes. . . . Contrast in styles. Ginger Rogers, her hair tied back with blue bows, and wearing slacks (good thing Mr. DeMille didn't see you, Ginger), walking down an RKO street with ultra-chic Irene Castle.

Margaret Lindsay, who is supposed to be marrying Bob Abbott, tells me, "Tisn't so." . . . Hedy Lamarr and Madeleine Carroll, probably the two most beautiful girls in Hollywood, are both sporting the new stenciled beauty spot. . . . Franchot Tone and Pat Di Cicco chewing the rag—and the excellent food at Dave Chasen's. (Don't believe the tales tying Franchot with another girl. He is taking his time before romancing again.) . . . Joan Blondell and Dick Powell, a twosome at the same restaurant (Joan and Dick are among the more devoted of the young married set in Hollywood). . . . Charlie McCarthy was the first to make a complete tour of the new and very swaggar NBC headquarters. But Charlie didn't see very much. He was carried round in a suitcase.

Bing Crosby is starting the town in the loudest shirts of the season—bright blue things with palm trees on them, which he brought back from Bermuda. "When you look at them," says Bing—with truth, "You can almost hear the thunder of the surf." . . . Pint-sized Mickey Rooney and diminutive Eddie Buzzell are walking along a Metro street. In front of them is six-foot Walter Pidgeon. I am just in time to hear Mr. Rooney shout to Mr. Pidgeon, "I'll get on Ed-die's back, and then we can lick you." . . . Margaret Sullivan has received— from Joan Crawford—her first set of baby clothes for the infant anticipated in March. They do things early in Hollywood. Like the Christmas shopping, which is now in progress or finished for most of the stars.

When a Penalty Pass Should Be Avoided

By Harold Sharpsteen.

When partner doubles an opening suit bid of one, a pass for penalties is seldom advisable. As a rule, doubler is not interested in defending the contract, preferring to play the hand in some other suit make. The pass should be avoided whenever possible.

Defenders will be required to win seven tricks to defeat a contract of one, and doubler can not be relied upon to take more than three defensive tricks. Doubler's partner, therefore, if he passes, must be able to count four certain tricks in his own hands, usually trump tricks. Unless he can figure seven tricks defensively, partner should not pass.

To takeout double of one spade, doubler's partner would probably be justified in passing, holding:

S-Q J 8 7 6 4 H-A 8 D-7

C-J 8 6 4

But analyze the following deal, in which South opened the bidding one club, West doubling for a takeout, and after North's pass, East passed for penalties holding seven of South's trumps, headed by the queen-jack.

East's penalty pass placed all the adverse trumps and South was able to fulfill his contract.

North.

H-8 5 3
D-8 6 4 2

West.

D-10 7
C-Q J 10 8 6 5 4

South.
S-8 6 2
H-A K 4
D-A K 5
C-A K 9 3

West opened spades, East trumping the third round as North's spade queen was played. If East returns a heart or diamond, South takes his four red tricks, and forces East to trump. East leads the club queen which South wins and forces East again. When East leads the club jack South ducks to set up his ace-nine over East's club ten-eight, giving South his contract.

A penalty pass of a takeout double against a trump bid generally signals preparedness for a lead of trumps. Many fine players assume a penalty pass calls for a trump opening lead.

Insufficient Vitamin B Weakens an Appetite

By Dr. William Brody.

In "New Design for Dwindling" a reduction diet is given in detail, and the overweight individual is advised to take a daily vitamin supplement with the diet. Now vitamin B is sometimes called the "appetite-promoting" vitamin, and in fact the same vitamin supplement, containing B and other vitamins, will help an underweight person with poor appetite to gain weight and vitality. This is too much for the layman with a smattering of medical knowledge to handle. He is apt to ask me how I reconcile such contradictory assertions.

A look into physiology may help to clarify the apparent conflict. In the normal stomach there are contractions of the muscular coat when the stomach has been empty for a while, and these contractions cause the sensation we call hunger. If the contractions are more vigorous than normal they may cause actual pain, or distress—hunger-pains. Chewing palatable food quickly inhibits or stops the contractions.

Now a good many overweight individuals have rather too much appetite, as they say. In a sense there may be some foundation for that belief, for certainly many overweight individuals crave and can eat larger quantities of sugar, candy or sweets than the normal individual does or can. But the overeating of the obese individual is due rather to the atony of the stomach muscle and the consequent desire for a greater quantity of food in the stomach to give that satisfying sense of fullness or repletion which naturally regulates the intake of food. Not only that, but also the flabbiness of the voluntary belly muscles, the muscles of the abdominal wall, in one who takes little exercise, is a factor of overeating.

In his book "The Little Things in Life" (Appleton-Century) Professor Barnett Sure suggests that prolonged deficiency of vitamin B in the diet leads to atony of the stomach muscle, so that the hunger contractions are weaker and appetite is poor.

Most people, fat or thin, are plodding along on an inadequate diet, so far as vitamins are concerned, anyway. When they restrict the diet for the purpose of reduction or for any other purpose they cut down the vitamin intake along with the caloric intake. This rather severe restriction in the vitamin intake accounts for the failures and for many of the disasters that come to those who attempt to diet without benefit of medical advice.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Fifty-Fifty.

Is the blood of a human infant more of the mother's or more of the father's? Who is nearest to a man, his mother or his son? Your answer to these questions will end a prolonged debate in our household. (Mr. M. L.)

Answer—Mother and father contribute equally to the blood of the child. A man's son is nearer to him than his mother, if an absolute choice must be made.

Try Creating Sunshiny Effect In Remodeling an Old House

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

"A friend of mine was telling me," writes Mrs. H. E. P., "about how your column helped her in doing over her home. So here I come for some advice. We've just bought an old house and are remodeling it by degrees.

"The dining room was dark and gloomy, so it has been the first to receive our attention. We tore off a side veranda, took out a door, changed the windows and ripped out the wainscoting. It is much lighter now but as it has a northern exposure, I would like to create as sunshiny an effect as possible. On the north wall we have a bay window, while the opposite wall has a small casement window with frosted glass in it because it's so close to the next house.

"The floors are painted dark red—I will just have to be content with a new coat of paint since we won't be able to put in hardwood floors for a year or so, and I want to do without a large rug till we get the new floors. I have a 6x9 that could go under the table—then could add some small throw rugs. Woodwork for this room will be dark white with mahogany finished doors. The furniture is walnut with blue leather chair seats."

A Center Lighting Fixture.

"There is an arch leading into the living room, which is a beautiful well-lighted room. 24x12. Next spring I'll be doing it over. Right now I want your suggestions for dining room wall paper and border (the ceilings slope in slightly near the top); curtains; floor; light fixture for the center of the room; pictures or mirrors if any. Thank you in advance."

The Answer.

By all means plan both rooms now even though you won't actually do over the living room at present. I'd like to see a rather plain wallpaper in both rooms, white with a small dot or stripe pattern, and the simplest possible border or wooden molding. Then white glass curtains with side draperies of chintz, brightly flowered on a white ground. Why not paint the floor in a rose-rust color—not too dark—and you might consider carpeting it all over instead of putting in hardwood. You could have the carpeting in both rooms. The same tone of light rose-rust broadloom would be pleasant here, and practical, too, if you choose it in a two-tone leafy pattern that won't show marks or wear. If possible I'd paint the doors to match the woodwork, as dark doors have a way of looming up and seeming to chop up the room a lot. The nicest lighting fixture I can think of would be one with crystal drops, and there are now on the market some that aren't too expensive. If you can't manage this, choose something simple. I'd like to see mirrors in the dining room—it would brighten the effect a lot.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Boykin, care The Atlanta Constitution, for bulletin, "Ideas for Dining Rooms," if your problem is how to fit old furniture into a fresh new scene.

TODAY'S CHARM TIP

A fine shopping rule is to buy only what you need for the type of life you lead and to complement the wardrobe that you already have.

Smart Dress for Bridge—Barbara Bell

Women who have many social activities to fill up their afternoons will like this distinctive dress, made on decidedly slenderizing lines. All the interest is concentrated at the top. The bishop sleeves and the draped jabot trims rippling from a plain, flat collar, are both details that larger women wear exceptionally well—and both are right in the forefront of fashion. The skirt fits simply over the hips, and has just enough fullness at the hem to add a touch of afternoon-ish formality.

For this smart design, velvet, silk crepe, satin and thin wool are ideal fabrics. Wear a big metal brooch at the neckline or one of the new shaped necklaces. Remember that dark colors are most slenderizing, so use jewelry to get your glitz and brilliance. Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1613-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5 yards of 39-inch material with long sleeves. With short, 4 3/4 yards. Contrasting collar and jabot would take 3-4 yards. Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Fashion Pattern Book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

Bridge Party To Assemble Society At Club Tomorrow Afternoon

By Sally Forth.

THE establishment of a central library at the E. Rivers school is the splendid motive back of the mammoth benefit bridge to be sponsored by the school P. T. A. tomorrow. The party will be held at Davidson's, beginning at 3 o'clock, and the list of reservations is a forecast of its success, for practically everyone will be there. Mrs. Neal Conrad is president of the P. T. A., and assisting her in preparations for the event are Mrs. William Campbell Jr., chairman, and Mrs. Lee McNaughton, co-chairman.

But wait till you hear about all the grand prizes that have been secured by the prize committee! Can you imagine anything nicer than receiving as a reward for your high score a radio, an order for an expensive pair of shoes, an overnight bag, a suitcase, or a dress from one of Atlanta's smartest shops?

Then there are such grand things offered as hams, cakes, perfume, hats, and an order for a portrait by a well-known Atlanta artist. Now, can you think of greater inducements to put forth your best efforts at bridge?

Others who are responsible for much of the predicted success of the venture are Mrs. Thomas J. Scott, ticket chairman; Mrs. Huch Nunnally and Mrs. Varney Ward, chairmen of prizes, and Mrs. Green Warren, chairman of the sale of candy.

SOCIALLY prominent southern-ers will attend the marriage of Eleanor Gray and Stratton Foster, whose wedding bells chime on November 8. Heading the list are Mr. and Mrs. Josephus Daniels Jr. and their young son, Edgar Foster Daniels, who will motor here on November 6 from Raleigh, N. C. Mrs. Daniels, the former Eveline Foster, is a cousin of the groom-to-be, and is married to Mr. Daniels, son of the famous Josephus Daniels, owner and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer.

Mrs. Edgar M. Foster, the charming chatelaine of Lynnlawn, her home in Nashville, arrives that same day. Mrs. John M. Brannan, owner of Foxland Hall, another show place in Nashville, will accompany Mrs. Foster to Atlanta to attend the marriage of her nephew to the pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Inman Gray. Added to the list of Nashvillians attending the ceremony are the names of Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick Hardwick, who will visit Mr. and Mrs. Foster Hume during their sojourn in the city. Included in the list of wedding guests are the names of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Boswell, of New Orleans. Mrs. Boswell will be remembered as the former Laura Lee Cooney, of Atlanta, and her friends anticipate her visit with particular interest.

Sentiment figures conspicuously in the arrival of Betty, the colored mammy of uncertain age, who will accompany the groom-elect's mother to Atlanta. She nursed the groom-elect in his infancy and says she is coming to Atlanta to see "her baby" plant his troth in his fair bride-to-be at a brilliant ceremony at North Avenue Presbyterian church.

Miss Marion Louise Bell Weds Mr. Harrison at Church Ceremony

Miss Marion Louise Bell became the bride of Nathaniel Cole Harrison Jr. at a brilliant ceremony solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at Druid Hills Baptist church in the presence of a prominent assemblage of friends and relatives.

Dr. Louie D. Newton officiated, and a musical program was presented by Mrs. John D. Felder, organist.

The altar was banked with palms and beautified with pedestal baskets and Grecian urns of Easter lilies. Cathedral candelabra held white tapers, and the family pews were designated by clusters of Easter lilies tied with white satin ribbon.

Ushers and groomsmen were Dr. George Fuller, Morris Ewing, Lewis Gregg, Dr. Joseph D. Osborne, Paul D. Hulfish, Marion E. Bleakley, Ewell Gay, William Inman, Dan Dockstader, David D. Long Jr., James R. Fitzpatrick and Joe Ricketts, of Pensacola, Florida.

Mrs. Charles Ellis Duncan, of Marietta, was the bride's matron of honor. She wore a gown of periwinkle blue faille taffeta fastened on Empire lines, the bodice of which featured short puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. The hemline of the hoop skirt was trimmed with ruching, and her matching velvet hat was adorned with ostrich tips. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, snapdragons, pom-pom chrysanthemums and blue delphinium.

Bridesmaids were Misses Martha Ewing, Patricia Poole, Mary Carver, Hilda McDonald, Mildred Ewing and Mrs. W. S. Martin, of Rutherfordton, N. C. Miss Marilyn Lundy, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. They wore gowns fashioned similar to that worn by the matron of honor and carried bouquets like that of Mrs. Duncan.

The beautiful bride entered with her father, Henry Grover Bell, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Edward H. Mattingly, of Albany, N. Y. Her wedding gown of ivory Duchess satin introduced fullness in the back to form a long train. The bodice featured a sweetheart neckline edged with satin ruching, and the long sleeves extended to form points over the wrists. Her tulle veil was loaned by Mrs. Sam Bigelow, of Richmond, Va., cousin of the groom. The veil was caught to her dark hair with orange blossoms, and was fastened in tiers. Her bouquet was composed of white orchids and valley lilies made in cascade effect.

Mrs. Henry Grover Bell, mother of the bride, wore a model of fuchsia velvet with a matching hat trimmed with ostrich tips. Her flowers were orchids. Mrs. Nathaniel Cole Harrison, mother of the groom, was attired in a gown of sapphire blue crepe worn with matching hat, and her flowers were orchids. After the ceremony Mr. Harrison and his bride left for a wedding trip to New Orleans. Upon their return they will reside in Pensacola, Fla., where the groom is connected in business.

Mrs. Harrison wore for traveling a cinnamon brown ensemble under a full length tweed coat trimmed with martin. Her brown hat was complemented by alligator accessories, and her flowers were orchids.

Out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Harrison Jr., Petersburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Keener, of Salem, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graydon, of McRae.

Men Love Girls With PEP
If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties. BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep. So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders. You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Boone's Captors Take Him to Empty Log House at the Edge of a Forest

By DENVER BARDWELL.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. Alice Markley, one of a group of New Englanders who are emigrating to California, is saved by Boone, a young trapper and buffalo hunter, from being swept overboard when the side-wheeler Keatney hits a snag in the Missouri river. She admires the buckskin-clad plainsman but she shows her revulsion and avoids him after Peter McCandless, Indian trader who is outfitting the wagon train headed by Elias Hunt, refers to her as a "squaw" man. Peter dislikes him because he refuses to trade with him. Peter lands below Kansas City at his wagon factory and Stubby, his lieutenant, directs the unloading of heavy boxes of Enfield rifles to be traded with the Indians for buffalo hides. The plan is for Indians to massacre the emigrants and get the rifles from the wagon's false bottoms. McCandless tells Stubby he's going with Hunt's wagon train to "save" a pretty girl. Jere accepts Hunt's invitation to act as guide to be near Alice but Peter says he's engaged Tom Hendon, whom Jere knows to be a renegade. Hunt says Jere may go along but Stubby buys up options on all available wagons. The wife of one of Hunt's men dies. He wants to return east and Jere buys his wagon but his start is delayed by a fake message from Stubby and men named Jenks and Zee rob him and hold him bound in an old log cabin. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XIII. Zee shoved his hat back on his high, bald head and began laughing. Jenks joined him in merriment.

"You're a bigger fool than I figured you was, Boone," Zee declared. "You want us to build a little fire under you to make your tongue waggle right?"

"That'd do you mighty little good," Boone replied readily. "The money's hid in my wagon where nobody but me can find it. How you figger to get at it with Lew Sanders watching it day and night like he'll be doing 'till I show up?"

"You played hell, Zee," Jenks said harshly. "Losin' your nerve thataway and lettin' 'im leave the waggin'—"

"Shut up!" Zee commanded angrily, glaring at his companion. "S'pose you woulda done it different, huh? We still got to git that waggin, ain't we? Boone, you write Lew Sanders a note, sayin' you're at Laughlin's waitin' to load on more freight and for him to let me have your waggin'."

"So Stubby Dettman and Pete McCandless are backing your hand in this, after all," Boone accused calmly.

Zee turned his glare upon Jenks and grated, "You fool! You stick here like a leech 'till I git back and keep your blabber shut tight."

He went out angrily. Jenks slouched sulkily against the opposite wall from Boone for an hour, smoking his pipe intermittently. He rebuffed Boone's effort at conversation. He was above medium size, hard, fairly well-dressed and had shifty eyes which gave his prisoner no more than hasty, furtive glances. After two hours Boone asked for water. It was nearing midday.

Jenks went into the front part of the log house and dragged a rickety table in to place near the gray old fireplace. He went back and brought in a box of provisions, set it on the table and removed packages of food, a coffee pot, a small bucket and a little brass open-neck lamp. With the bucket in hand he went out. Within a few minutes he came back with water and an armful of wood. He gave Boone water, but did not offer to share the coffee and food that he prepared for himself.

The afternoon dragged heavily. Boone's feet and hands became painful under the bindings, but Jenks appeared much more miserable than his helpless charge. He stalked about, cursing and mumbling to himself with an increasing crescendo of irritation until the evening shadows and coolness of night approached. If Boone moved to relieve his cramped limbs, Jenks jumped nervously and cursed him. Once, as darkness increased, he drew his gun and stared at the shadowed form of his prisoner. The faint glow of live coals in the fireplace barely revealed his distorted face.

After long dark contemplation, he slowly replaced the black gun in his shoulder holster. Boone breathed a little easier. Jenks took the brass lamp and knelt down by the fireplace, held the wick to a live coal and blew on it 'till a flame blazed up. When he went to set the lamp on the table his finger stuck in the small handle hole until he slammed the lamp loose on the table, extinguishing the flame. He mumbled louder curses and left the place in darkness except for the weak pink glow of the hearth coals. At last he spoke directly to Boone:

It was several hundred yards from the Border Oasis to Laughlin and Castain's store. Intervening were a nondescript assortment of business places, saloons, repair shops, restaurants and a little creek. Just before Boone started down the slant of the narrow boardwalk to the creek bridge, his companion dropped behind because there was no room on the slender plank for two men abreast. The broader sidewalk had ceased with the last houses above the crest of the little hill. A wagon driver shouted loudly and popped a whip at straining mules pulling a heavy load up the opposite ruddy hillside. No one else was visible ahead as Boone stepped upon the bridge. Something small and hard poked against his back.

"Stop, Boone!" the man behind ordered. "Don't move, or you'll git it in the backbone!" He snatched Boone's left hip gun.

The second stranger, who had followed several steps behind, came up and relieved the plainsman of his other gun. The man who held a gun muzzle against his spine now spoke again.

"We'll put these here guns outa sight, Boone," he said, "but they'll be right handy all the time in case you make a holler or sign to anybody. Go on across the bridge and turn off on that footpath leadin' up 'side the creek. Git along!"

For a flashing second Jere Boone tensed his muscles to turn upon his captors, then his quick rush of rage cooled. No other persons were in sight except the mule driver and he was too busy to see this little play going on behind him. It would be easy for these killers to commit murder here and get away before the deed was discovered. Boone decided to gamble on the future and went the footpath.

He had to walk more than 300 yards with the constant menace of death prodding him onward. The sparsely, small trees near the bridge gave way soon to thicker timber as the path led on farther away from the scattered houses. At last the man who had pretended to be a messenger from Matt Laughlin made him turn off the dwindling path. They climbed between trees up the steep ravine side and came abruptly to the rear of a log house set within the edge of the forest. A door was kicked open and Boone was shoved inside of a darkened, windowless and empty rear room. Dust lay thickly on the rough slab floor. Old, packed ashes half filled a fireplace at one end.

"Damn it, Boone, I can't stand it no longer! I'm gonna hafta kill you and git outa this place 'fore I go crazy!"

Boone had expected a bullet without the faint mercy of warning. He thought again now about Alice Markley and the fearful dangers ahead for her on the emigrant trail as he had been thinking so much during the torturous hours of the day. Where he had before held the vaguest suspicion of McCandless, he now had no doubt that in some way McCandless meant to betray the emigrants. Just how and why he could not decipher, but the certainty of tremendous impending tragedy maneuvered by the ruthless Indian trader for his selfish greed made the stoic, calm plainsman value life and liberty of action more dearly than ever before. Completely helpless, he could not fight for his life except by the craftiness of argument.

"If you do that, you're already crazy, Jenks," he stated at last in his easiest tones. "Zee went like a fool right into the trap I was waiting for him. Lew Sanders knows my handwriting. He turned Zee in to Sheriff Bob Tasker and Tasker is looking for you this minute. Murder me and you hang with Zee. Turn me loose and run like all the ghosts of hell was after you is the wisest thing you could ever do this side your grave."

Jere Boone could scarcely see the outlines of the man before him in the middle of the old kitchen, but he could hear the labored breathing and the subtle sounds of mouth opening, tongue licking dry lips. It seemed that the terrified jitteriness of Jenks' muddled mind made thunders in his floundering, but then Boone knew it was his own heart knocking under his chin.

At last the distracted man spoke with spasmodic outburst: "I'll find out—you can't git away. Whatever's happened, I'll come back and kill you fer what you done!" He flew into action, jerked the door to the other room shut and bolted it, then struggled and babbled curses at the sagging, warped outside door before he got it closed and bolted behind him. Boone heard the half-crazed fellow's running footsteps, heard the cracking of limbs and twigs and mumbled profanity as trees got in the way.

If Jere Boone had not had the urge for life itself to plunge him into movement, the thrill of being able to struggle and strain his sleeping, aching limbs was sufficient reason to make the futile fight against his thoughts. He twisted and squirmed and fought the wickedly clenching strands about wrists and ankles until he was damp with sweat and his throat was parched dry with hard breathing and thirst. He had not asked for, nor been given water since cures at the sagging, warped outside door before he got it closed and bolted behind him. Boone heard the half-crazed fellow's running footsteps, heard the cracking of limbs and twigs and mumbled profanity as trees got in the way.

Twisting and turning in his effort to bring himself upright on his knees, he nearly knocked one leg out from under the fragile old table. After long minutes, breathing hard with exhaustion, he succeeded in bucking up from a sidelong position, with head burrowing against the floor, and got to his knees, then straightened beside the table.

OFF SATURDAY COMES IN HANDY FOR BULLDOGS

Large Crowd Greeted Beaten Team on Return From Holy Cross.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 24.—Beaten but unbowed, the valiant Georgia Bulldog football team returned to Athens early this morning after having suffered a severe defeat at the hands of the Holy Crusaders in Worcester, Mass.

However, the crippled Red and Black squad waged a better battle than the 29-to-6 score might indicate. Although trailing by a score of 15 to 6 at the half-way point, the Bulldogs held their own until the first string, ravaged by fatigue and injuries, was forced to give over to inexperienced reserves who were no match for the strong Crusaders.

SQUAD GREETED.
In spite of the fact that the train carrying the vanquished gridiron warriors arrived in the classic City in the early morning hours, a large group of their fellow students were on hand to greet their return.

A checkup after the clouds of battle had receded revealed that four regulars and several reserves had joined the hospital crew.

The regulars listed among those injured are Alternate Captain Marvin Gillespie, dislocated shoulder; Albert DeCharleroy, fractured hand; Bob Salisbury, chest injury; and Harry Stevens, slight back injury.

OFF SATURDAY.

The Bulldogs are fortunate in that they have an off day next Saturday due to a vacancy in this season's schedule which will give them time to regain full strength before encountering Florida in Jacksonville the following Saturday.

Coach Joel Hunt excused those members of the squad who made the trip from practice today but stated that tomorrow he will begin in earnest to repair the damage inflicted by the Crusaders.

GRID FLASHES

TENNESSEE.
KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 24.—Tennessee reserves, using L. S. U. formations, marched through the varsity team this afternoon as the Vols prepared for next Saturday's game with the Tigers, scheduled as the top-ranking contest for this week end in the south.

Murray Warmath, Vol assistant coach who has coached L. S. U. in four games this year, gave a pep talk to the information that he has garnered.

DUKE.

DURHAM, N. C., Oct. 24.—Duke's Blue Devils went through a stiff drill, during which pass defense was a stressed department, as they opened work today for the game with North Carolina at Chapel Hill Saturday.

Eric Tipton, veteran halfback who was injured in the league game last week, ran at his regular berth for the first time since he was hurt and apparently was ready to go against the Tar Heels.

Bob Spangler, quarterback who was unable to play against Wake Forest Saturday due to illness, was also back in action at his usual post today. His illness was found to be a nasal infection which was relieved Saturday night at Duke hospital.

ALABAMA.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Oct. 24.—Perron Slaughter, veteran Alabama end who has been on the sidelines for 10 days due to a fractured leg, was able to play against the Kentucky Wildcats Saturday at Lexington. Trainer Jack Stuart stated today, the veteran flanker was injured in the Tennessee clash and did not see service against Sewanee last Saturday.

Pie Davis, second-string fullback, will be out for this week's practice because of a wrenched knee.

The team ran through light signal and blocking drills today with Billy Siemens running with the first team at right halfback.

AUBURN.

AUBURN, Ala., Oct. 24.—Coach Jack Meagher gave the Auburn Tigers a physical, but no mental rest today as he prepared for an inter-sectional encounter with Rice at Houston Saturday. Meagher pointed out in an extended pre-practice lecture mistakes committed last week as the Tigers bowed to Georgia Tech, 7-6, at Atlanta.

Regulars, many of them badly bruised in the Tech game, were given only a light workout, but third and fourth stringers were scrimmaged until darkness halted activities. Riddle and Deal in the backfield, and McGhee, Christensen and Bulger, in the line, stood out.

OLE MISS.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Oct. 24.—The University of Mississippi Rebels went through a light offensive scrimmage today with concentration on pass defense.

George Kinard, guard, was injured in last week's Centenary game but should be able to play in Washington Friday night against George Washington. The team will leave here Wednesday night.

INDOMITABLE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Indomitable, five-year-old Man O' War, gelding from Henry Lustig's Longchamps farms, had things all his own way in the Class "D" Fishkill handicap at Empire City today as the final week of New York's long racing season began.

HIGH SCHOOLS OPEN 1938 BOWLING SEASON

Indications that Atlanta high school bowlers will have a successful season were seen in the interest and enthusiasm displayed as the league officially opened its 1938 season yesterday. Professor W. O.

Cheney, of Tech High, officiated during the opening program. Bowling with Professor Cheney in the picture is Margaret Stewart, of Commercial High. Mr. Cheney bowled the first ball yesterday.

ALL IN THE GAME

The Commodores also have Keene, Ford, Housman, Huggins and Bert Marshall as ball carriers, kickers and passers.

Vanderbilt throws a lot of passes. There were 23 attempted and nine completed in the L. S. U. game.

I took a look at some of the offensive formations which had been drawn on the board out at Tech yesterday.

The Commodores line up in all sorts of ways. They do not necessarily lean to orthodox stuff.

In fact, when Bert Marshall is running he is just as apt as not to let his interference go one way while he goes another.

The Commodores are tricky and resourceful.

So the Jackets are going to have their feet held to the fire again this week. As far as the toughening process is concerned, they're ready.

They've only met Notre Dame, Duke and Auburn in a row.

THE HAWK STIRS MEMORIES.

Hawk Cavette, Tech's prolific punter, is stirring memories of old days at Georgia Tech, days when Buck Flowers was the best kicker the south had seen.

One year Flowers had a kicking average of 47 yards for a 10-game schedule. George Griffin recalled it yesterday.

Cavette is coming along nicely. He was not particularly impressive in the Duke game, but against Mercer, Notre Dame and Auburn, the Hawk did some kicking which will stack up with the best.

In that Notre Dame game he had an average of almost 49 yards, which is a terrific average.

The Hawk, I am sure, is the sort of boy who won't read the papers to learn what a fine kicker he is. It really isn't necessary with the average he is compiling.

A DREAM ALMOST CAME TRUE.

Buck Shaw, Tech's Texas drop kicker, had a dream before the Notre Dame game. He dreamt he dropkicked a field goal which won the game for the Jackets.

Well, it has been brought to light after so long a time that the Jackets were on the verge of using him at one stage of the game before Notre Dame had scored the second touchdown, and only a fumble prevented his going in and making the attempt.

Shaw was warming up to go in when Tech fumbled. So a dream almost came true. He might have missed but at least he would have the chance to try it.

Shaw was sent into the Auburn game expressly to try for a field goal. Then Tech went ahead and scored on a pass and Shaw had the pleasure of drop-kicking the extra point in what Coach Alex describes as a "7-6 tie."

BOYS' HI BOWLER FIRST-DAY STAR

Preston Mason Has 120 Game as High Schools Open Season.

The annual High School Bowling league season was officially opened at the downtown alleys Monday afternoon with 12 teams making up the roster of the bowling loop.

Principal W. O. Cheney, of Tech High school, gave the opening of play in the league an official touch as he rolled the first ball down the alley that started the league in competitive play. After rolling a practice ball, Principal Cheney rolled a ball right into the "pocket" for a strike and was greeted with a round of applause from the nearly 100 students that rolled in the loop.

A team of girls from Commercial High school entered the league and gave added impetus to the scoring, though they dropped two games to Commercial High's Boys. Boys' High "Green" won two from Boys' High "Blue," Boys' High "Purple" won one from Boys' High "White," Tech High "Gold" won two from Tech High "Purple," Russell High and Tech High "Greens" split their two-game match, and the boys' High "Silver" bowled their games in an advance match for Marist.

Following the league play, a meeting was held at the office of the alleys with officers being elected and rules and by-laws passed. Elizabeth Helton, of Commercial High, was chosen as president of the prep school league. Robert Outler, of Boys' High, was named vice president; Harry Hill, of Tech High, was elected secretary, and Amos Collins, of Russell High, was named treasurer.

Included among the individuals present for the league bowling were: Russell, Bob Lipschutz, Ed Demere, Robert Outler, Preston Mason, Bill Carroll, C. Benson, Bob Gaston, B. Smith, Jack Lincoln, Stanford Makover, Bob Long, Turner Paschal, Edward Sewell, Hugh Wilson, Robert Caldwell, Truman Kahn, Joe Schleinger, Weyman Townsend, Harry Hill, Harry Guaberry, Brent Buckman, Sam Franklin, Willie Green, Thomas Hill, Edwin King, David Savini, Luther Clay, Lenthal Turner, Buddy Waldrop, Lionel Jones, George Tolburn, Arch Bridges, H. O. Herolan, E. B. Buchanan, D. O. Savini, A. E. Bridges, Jack Byars, Amos Collins, Joe Farnell, Harold Cater, H. W. Belcher, James Barron, John King, George Awtry, Jack Dittler, Milton Romm and Wade Atkinson.

Morris Brown Plays Tough Florida A & M

Never before in the history of colored football has there been a better gridiron spectacle than will be brought to Atlanta Saturday afternoon, when the strong Florida A. & M. College of Tallahassee, undefeated in two hard games, meets the undefeated Morris Brown aggregation at Ponce de Leon park in the feature game of the colored Southern conference.

Rivalry between the two schools is at the breaking point, and they meet undefeated in a game that will probably decide the championship. A bitter hard struggle looms as Florida is rated a bit higher in the conference than the Morris Brown aggregation.

WILCOX, CUSHING TO BE IN SHAPE FOR VANDERBILT

Tech Likely To Invade Nashville Thursday in Good Physical Trim.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Barring injuries in practice this week, Tech's gallant grid warriors should be in their best physical condition of the season against Vanderbilt in Nashville Saturday.

The squad came through its battle with Jack Meager's Auburn Tigers with only a couple of minor injuries.

Bob Ison, Hawk Cavette and Bo Richards are having trouble with light leg hurts but will be ready to scrimmage before the week is over.

Then too, Allen Wilcox and Glen Cushing, two of the injured members of last week, will be ready for the men of Ray Morrison. Other ailments of the squad have cleared up and every man on the team is expected to be ready by Saturday.

VANDY PLAYS.

As usual, the Jacket reserves will get a look at Vandy plays this afternoon with the first-stringers waiting until tomorrow to scrimmage.

Coach Roy McArthur, who scouted the Commodores in the game with L. S. U., said Morrison's eleven looked "pretty darn good" and intimated the Jackets would have their hands full Saturday.

And since about three-quarters worth of the playing was done in territory of the Bayou Tigers, one is inclined to agree with Scout McArthur.

The Vanderbilts have a famed aerial attack but since Tech stopped the passes of Auburn so well, observers are not likely to give you any odds on that point.

PASS DEFENSE.

However, there is little doubt much time will be spent at the flats on pass defense.

Sixty-minute performers against the Plainsmen will take it easy this week, since, as Coach Alex said, they really don't need much work. Captain Jack Chivington, Shorty Brooks and George Smith played without relief, while a couple of others, Walter Rimmer, Junior Anderson and Howard Ector, were only out of the game a couple of minutes.

Scrimmages will be held today and tomorrow. The team will leave after practice Thursday night, arriving in Nashville Friday morning.

Skeet, Trap Shoot Begins Here Friday

Trap and skeet shooters from all sections of the south have been invited to participate in the fall festival tournament, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Capitol Gun Club.

There will be 800 registered targets for the shooters to fire away at during the three-day program.

The program has been sanctioned by the American trapshooting and skeet-shooting associations and any record made in the shoot will be officially approved.

Twenty-two sterling silver trophies will be given the winners of the various events.

Three hundred targets will be fired Friday, with the singles championship and 100 pairs of doubles, in straight traps.

VOLS MAY HAVE TO DO THIS TO GET BY L. S. U.

Major Bob Neyland's Vols are resorting to novel methods of toting the pigskin in practice for the Tennessee-L. S. U. tussle at Knoxville Saturday. Here's one play, called "toting the ball toter," that looks rather "horsey." Bob Suffridge, 19-year-old sophomore guard, is carrying on his back Walter (Babe) Wood, brilliant triple-threat quarterback. Maybe he should be termed a quadruple-threat, for, in addition to his passing, running and kicking ability, he seems to be riding with the ball in All-America fashion.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By GRANTLAND RICE.

THE PANTHER NEVER POINTS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Probably the only coach in the country who doesn't point his team for any one game is Jock Sutherland. Playing the kind of schedule he does every year, Jock can't afford to do any pointing. He just gets his team up there at the start of a season and then tries to hold it there.

So far as the Pitt players are concerned, one opponent is just like another. They are taught to have a high regard for all and to go—as Jock puts it—helmet-skelter from whistle to whistle. It must be a good system. The doctor has won a lot of games with it.

To date, in this turbulent campaign, with other first-rate teams spinning under the shock of rude defeats, the Sutherland system has yielded victories over West Virginia, Temple, Duquesne, Wisconsin and S. M. U. Just ahead lies Fordham, then will come Carnegie Tech, Nebraska, Penn State and Duke—a ten-game schedule that has the Panther striking out in all directions—north, east, south and west—and at the same time not neglecting the neighbors children, Carnegie Tech and Duquesne.

There are no breathers in that schedule. There couldn't be any, no matter what the original idea was, because every team that plays Pitt feels that that game represents its big chance. It's the old story of everybody shooting at the big guy—for that way lies the greatest glory. And so, pointed at but never pointing, the Panther grows from week to week.

Sutherland manages to keep his players at a high level all season by coaching them in a calm, professional manner. Dressing room histrionics have no part in his system. There are no blood-tinging pep talks from the doctor before a game or between halves. Before a game he tells the players what he wants them to do. Between halves he tells them wherein they have failed to do it. If they are trailing at the half he doesn't try to whip them to a fury by yelling at them, pleading with them or shedding tears over the disaster that is about to befall the old school. He merely points out their mistakes, reminds them of his notions of how the game should be played and then sends them out to do as they have been told.

No one ever saw a Pitt team coached by Sutherland rush out of a dressing room in a fury. Jock doesn't believe in furious football—the fighting, crying, hysterical kind of football. He wants his players to fight hard all the way. But he doesn't want them to play with their heads whirling and tears of rage in their eyes. (Copyright, 1938, by Grantland Rice.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Following the buying in the stock market today shifted to utilities, a few aircraft, oils and specialties.

While profit-taking in the recently buoyant steels, motors, rubbers, mail orders, coppers and farm implements tended to give the list a spotty appearance at the close, gains running to a point or two generally predominated with a handful of issues up around 5.

A number of new highs for the past year were in evidence.

Business recovery prospects, while ignored by some pivotal groups, still were the principal sustaining influence marketwide and resistance to selling was such that declines, in most cases, were limited to minor fractions.

The Associated Press average of 50 stocks moved up .2 of a point to 53.3, a new high since October 7, last year. The ticker tape was late a while in the forenoon, but thereafter the pace was no more than steady and the day's volume amounted to 1,678,350 shares.

Utilities were stimulated by fresh rumors of a billion-dollar expansion and rehabilitation program to be instituted by the larger power companies in co-operation with the government, with an initial outlay of some $250,000,000 to be announced soon.

Among gainers of fractions to two or more in the curb were American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, United Gas and Lockhead Aircrafts. Among scattered losers was American Cyanamid "B." Turnover of 268,000 shares compared with 233,000 Friday.

Such stocks totaled 154,757,000 bushels October 1, 1937.

PRESBYTERY VOTES DOCTRINAL CHANGE

Atlanta Group Deletes Two Paragraphs Relating to Predestination.

Delegates to the 158th session of the Atlanta presbytery approved changes in doctrinal standards yesterday at the opening meeting at Oglethorpe University.

After warm discussion, they voted to delete two paragraphs relating to predestination in the Westminster Confession of Faith. This marked the first change since it was drawn up in 1648. The change was voted by the general assembly last May but had not been approved by the Atlanta group.

The Rev. John B. Dixon, of Morningside Presbyterian church, newly elected moderator, said the paragraphs were deleted because they were an "overstatement."

Delegates also discussed the program of Thornwell Orphanage and suggested that all churches in the Atlanta area devote their Thanksgiving services to this program.

The Rev. J. M. Carr discussed the adult education program of the church, reporting on the various projects undertaken.

Re-elected officers were the Rev. W. F. Hollingsworth, stated clerk and treasurer; the Rev. Julian Warner, pastor of the Capitol View Presbyterian church, endorsing clerk, and the Rev. E. T. Wilson, of Peachtree Road Presbyterian church, recording clerk. The meeting will continue today.

THIEF FLOUTS POLICE.

It pained the police desk sergeant at Austin, Texas, to record that an undaunted thief took a 2,300-volt electrical transformer from its station—which was on the pistol practice range of the police department.

Lines Form to the Right When Turner Dishes It Out

Does Anybody Here Have Fleas? Professor Lynch Needs Recruits

Trainer of London Circus, With Hippodrome Here, Is So Badly in Need of New Supply for His Stable He Offers Free Tickets for a Few.

Professor Lynch wants some fleas. The owner of the London Flea Circus, which is being exhibited daily as one of the main attractions of the Mammoth Marine Hippodrome at Peters and Castleberry streets, is so badly in need of "stock" to replenish his diminishing supply of trained fleas that he is offering free tickets to the hippodrome to all boys and girls who will bring him six fleas.

He is not particular about the fleas. They can come from hound dogs or from the backs of canine aristocrats. Professor Lynch says that if they are live and healthy he can train them just as well as can the Germans, from whom he once purchased his trained fleas. The fleas must be carefully corked in a dry bottle when brought to the professor.

COUNTY EMPLOYEES ENTERTAIN BOSSES

Buffet Supper and Dancing Feature Gathering of Government Workers.

Speeches were reduced to the irreducible minimum and politics was taboo last night as county commissioners, department heads and representatives in the Georgia assembly were entertained by members of the Fulton County Employees' Union No. 3, Chapter 2, headed by Kenneth Murrell.

Jokes and expressions of gratitude for being invited were the only things any speaker was permitted to touch upon. Guests were not expected to pay for their eats by entertaining the crowd, but were encouraged to "cut it short."

The event was just a good time gathering, featured, after a buffet supper, by dancing. Big Bill Turner, chief jester at Fulton tower, was the official server.

The hired help for once had their bosses at their mercy and it was a jovial, jolly and happy crowd. Departmental chiefs took the jibes in their stride and passed them back.

North Carolina will use cotton and rubber floor covering and cotton wall board in building its exhibit for the New York World's Fair.

donors must be under 15 years of age and must present their fleas between 4 o'clock and 6 o'clock this afternoon or during the same hours tomorrow. The hippodrome has been showing to capacity crowds since its opening last week. Other attractions include "Colossus," the 68-ton whale; "Sea-Tiny," the living mermaid, and the European headless woman. Doors open at 11 o'clock each morning.

Get Yourself a Dancing Partner And Help Bring Back the Waltz

Winners Will Receive Cash Prizes in November 2 Competition Here.

By LILLIE MAY ROBINSON. The waltz, which has come down through history and has survived the new-fangled muscular maneuvers, will be revived on the night of November 2, when The Constitution presents a "Bring Back the Waltz" contest in the Spanish room of the Henry Grady hotel.

To the winning couple will be awarded a cash prize of $25 and the right to compete with couples from each of six other Georgia cities in the state finals, at a later date. There will be cash prizes of $15 and $10 for second and third place winners in the city contest.

State winners will meet dancers from five other states in competition for an all-expense trip to New York for national finals in December. The winning couple in the New York dance will be given a three-month contract in Hollywood with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Get a Partner.

If you are 15 years of age or more, are not a professional dancer, and enjoy an old-fashioned waltz, get yourself a partner and prepare for this gala night of fun, entertainment and a chance to win fame and fortune.

Be sure to fill in the coupon printed below and send in to the "Bring Back the Waltz" editor of The Constitution. If you fail to do this, you cannot enter the contest.

Scores of nationally-known orchestras and organizations are co-operating in this movement to revive the waltz as America's national dance. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, under whose direction the national finals will be held, have produced the Great Waltz as a contribution to the revival. The production, which has as its stars Luise Rainer, Fernand Graven and Miliza Korjus, will be seen soon at Loew's.

Brush Up on Glide.

Better send in your entry blank today and get busy brushing up on your glide and romantic swing so that there will be nothing to stand in the way of you and your partner being that Atlanta couple who will be selected as best equipped to "Bring Back the Waltz," win a cash prize of $25 and a further opportunity to compete for that coveted three-month movie contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

An Atlanta orchestra will play such tunes as "The Blue Danube" and "Merry Widow Waltz" for contestants to dance.

ALABAMA ASSURED OF REVENUE OFFICE

Bankhead's Pressure Secures Selection of Birmingham.

JASPER, Ala., Oct. 24.—(AP)—Speaker William B. Bankhead announced today Birmingham had been chosen as the site for the southeastern regional office of the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The speaker said the office would have jurisdiction over the states of Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida, with subordinate offices in the other states.

Speaker Bankhead was informed of the choice today in a telephone conversation with a Treasury Department official. He said he had called Secretary Morgenthau previously to ask a reconsideration of a reported decision against location of the regional office in Alabama.
